BARE ARRESTS, FIRING OF 600 UNRRA THIEVES

Aids Sold Supplies for Own Profit

HERFORD, Germany, Nov. 29 [Thursday] — (AP) — The united nations relief and rehabilitation administration has dismissed, suspended, or arrested more than 600 of its workers accused of diverting relief supplies into the black market, it was announced today.

Leo J. Margolin of New York, chief of the UNRRA information bureau in Europe, said a majority of the workers involved were Americans and Britons employed in the French, American, and British occupation zones in Germany. The action followed a two months investigation.

Sold Earmarked Foods

Without specifying how many of the accused workers were from each zone, Margolin said:

"All were involved in black market dealings—actually selling or being a party to selling at black market prices foodstuffs and clothing earmarked for victims of war."

He explained that the accused workers would be replaced by demobilized American and British soldiers.

"Investigations will continue," Margolin said, "and before the first of the year, Lt. Gen. Frederick A. Morgan [chief of UNRRA operations in Germany and formerly assistant chief of staff for Gen. Eisenhower] hopes to have UNRRA a spotless organization."

Ferreting Out Teams

In a joint statement Gen. Morgan and Raphael Cilento Brisbane, Australian director of UNRRA in the British zone, said:

"We are determined to ferret out from the ranks of honest, sincere UNRRA workers members of teams who put personal profit above their trust of aiding unfortunate victims of war under our care.

"There is nothing more low and despicable than stealing from these luckless people, and UNRRA intends to see that the personnel of the organization keeps faith with the 47 nations supporting UNRRA, with the armies which sponsor its work, with displaced persons in Germany, and with other displaced persons who are our charges."

British Zone Arrests

Margolin said that in the last five weeks 13 UNRRA workers had been arrested and another had been sentenced to 12 months imprisonment during investigations in the British zone by military police and UNRRA officials.

The convicted worker was Francis Schiff, a Czechoslovak national who had been assigned to a relief team caring for displaced persons in the Bonn area. He was caught selling coffee to Germans.

NLRB Counts Ballot Returns from 27 States

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 28 (AP)—On the basis of mounting, incomplete returns the CIO United Steel Workers' union, representing workers in the nation's steel, aluminum, and iron ore producing centers, voted overwhelmingly today in favor of a strike to support demands for a $2 a day wage increase.

Unofficial returns to the national labor relations board from polling places in hundreds of plants in the large producing areas of 27 states showed those in sympathy with a walkout leading by a margin of nearly 5 to 1.

The vote late tonight stood:

For the strike, 340,678; against, 70,643.

Heavy Pennsylvania Vote

In western Pennsylvania, the greatest steel producing area, the returns showed 79,718 voting "yes" to the question of whether a work interruption was favored and 21,059 balloting "no." Similar ratios were reported from populous steel centers in Ohio, New York, Illinois, and other areas.

The trend in favor of a strike did not mean there would be one. The union had cautioned its representatives against any unauthorized or premature strike movements, emphasizing that authority for any such action rests with the wage policy committee.

The strike ballot, greatest in labor history, began before daylight and men from the blast furnaces and open hearths of the steel industry, and in plants of related metal industries, were voting all day. Some still were voting until nearly midnight in the election, supervised by the NLRB.

Includes Aluminum Workers

Today's balloting involved workers at all the plants in the system of the United States Steel corporation and numerous other large producers, including the Bethlehem Steel corporation, Republic Steel corporation, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube company.

It also involved aluminum workers who are now affiliated with the steel workers' union under the CIO.

The poll stemmed from the dispute between the union and management over whether a pay increase should be granted, as demanded by the union's policy committee at a meeting in Pittsburgh in October.

Negotiations for the increase between the United States Steel corporation, acting for five large subsidiaries, and the union ended in disagreement late in the summer.

CHICAGO AREA VOTE

United Steel Workers' members in eight of nine Chicago area plants yesterday voted in favor of a walkout. Results of the voting:

Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, South Chicago plant—394 for the strike; 59 against.

Inland Steel company, Indiana Harbor —6,849 for strike; 862 against.

United States Steel Products company, Harvey—88 against strike; 17 for.

Sager Lock works, a division of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing company, North Chicago—63 for the strike; 15 against.

American Steel and Wire company, Waukegan—977 for strike; 434 against.

Cyclone Fence division of American Steel and Wire, North Chicago—249 for strike; 29 against.

THE DESECRATER

WIDOW'S HOUSE SAWED IN HALF

Town Acts in Fight Over Widening of Road

Silver Lake, Minn., Nov. 28 [Special]—Mrs. Clara Casprzyk, 44, a widow and crippled, huddled alone today in the only whole room remaining in her house while a cold wind blew thru the other rooms exposed to the elements when her home was sawed in half on order of the village council.

With the aid of two canes required because of arthritis, the woman occasionally hobbled thru the bisected rooms of her dwelling and peered out thru the open sides at widened Center st., which, despite her resistance, took over the space part of her house once occupied.

Goes to Farm Home

After the house was sawed in half early in October, Mrs. Casprzyk remained there a week, then moved to the near-by farm home of her brother, Isadore Cacka. But yesterday she moved back again into her disfigured home. "I have no other place to stay," she said.

The room in which she lives is furnished only with a bed, kerosene stove, chairs, and a sewing machine. The woman has made her living as a dressmaker since the death of her husband two years ago.

Bisected by village carpenters in the story and a half, partly log house were the kitchen, dining room, and an upstairs bedroom. The living room was removed entirely.

The controversy that resulted in the removal of part of her house dates back to September, 1944, when the village council decided to widen Center st. Mayor Frank A. Bandes said repeated efforts, all unsuccessful, were made to reach a settlement with Mrs. Casprzyk for moving her house, which extended 16 feet into the area needed for the street.

Bandes said she refused an offer of $800, set by a committee of appraisers, and an offer by the village to move her house back into the lot and build a concrete basement under it. The mayor said she demanded $2,000.

Ordered to Move

Condemnation proceedings were instituted in court last summer and District Judge Joseph Moriarity ordered Mrs. Casprzyk to move by Oct. 1. When she didn't move by that date and ignored court summons to defend her refusal, the judge on Oct. 6 authorized the village to remove that portion of her house interfering with the proposed street widening.

A week later a crew of carpenters appeared at her home and sawed off 16 feet of the structure, approximately half of it.

War Long Over, but Miseries of German Troops Linger On

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Nov. 28—The first instances of frostbite among German prisoners of war released by the Russians and now being returned to their homes in western Germany by the British and Americans were observed today at Staaken camp near Spandau.

Camp [arrow] for Germans freed by Reds

Sick, emaciated German soldiers hobbled into camp, their legs swollen and congealed. Strangely enough, two barefoot refugees were not frostbitten, altho the soles of their feet were cut and bleeding.

"I feel like getting drunk every night to forget this camp," said Pvt. Alexander Nussbaum of New York City, a member of the 309th infantry regiment detachment on duty at Staaken. "It gets me down to see all this misery so long after the war's over."

Unlikely to Leave Soon

But Nussbaum is needed there because he speaks good German and has the executive ability to sort out cases needing hospitalization or recuperation before continuing their trek homeward.

Last July the Russians released 413,000 German prisoners from camps in the soviet union and the Germans began their long march westward. Thus far more than 160,000 have passed thru Staaken camp, of whom 60,000 were sent to homes in the British zone, 85,000 to the Russian zone, and 22,000 to the United States zone.

The Russians divided prisoners into four categories—those able to perform heavy labor, those able to perform lighter work, those unfit for work, the disabled and sick. All the prisoners received at Staaken fall into the last two categories, for the Russians are retaining Germans able to work as forced labor in the soviet union.

Perhaps 4 Millions Captured

Nobody knows exactly how many German prisoners the Russians captured, for Red army bulletins seldom announced figures, but estimates vary from 3 to 4 millions. Reports indicate perhaps a third of the prisoners died of wounds, exposure, or malnutrition. The physical appearance of prisoners reporting at Staaken bears out these estimates.

Today 86 men lacking arms or legs, chiefly the latter, arrived at Staaken. Some limped on crutches and others had contrived rude peg legs which they had strapped on.

Pvt. Frank Dwyer of New York City, also of the 309th infantry regiment, distributes blankets, shoes, and clothing to the tattered scarecrows.

"It seems as if shoe mines always got the right feet," said Dwyer, pointing to a pile of army shoes. "I give the left shoe to men who lost a right foot or leg and the right shoe to men who lost a left foot or leg, but look how many more left shoes I got in that pile than rights."

Women in Barracks

German nurses and WACs and Protestant sisters in black hoods were sheltered in barracks and the men in tents. In the barracks I found two orphans, Claus Rakowitz, 5, and his brother, Gerhardt, 3, who had come from Pomerania. Unescorted, they had traveled for 17 days in a boxcar to rejoin their grandmother near Erfurt.

They had never seen candy bars or tasted chocolate. When I gave each a pecan roll the children began using them like drumsticks until I motioned they were something to eat.

A 17 year old girl medical student, captured by the Russians, had trudged 15 miles from Anhalter station in Berlin to Staaken, carrying two bundles of her possessions. As a civilian she was not eligible to ride a prisoner of war train. The Russians search the cars when they reach the Red army zone and either throw civilian passengers into concentration camps or turn the train back to Staaken.

Tears rolled down the girl's face as she picked up her heavy bundles to walk back to Berlin to find a civilian train. I found room in my jeep, however, to carry her along with two Swiss girls from the Geneva International Red Cross supervising camp.

Army Reveals How It Blinded Enemy Radar

BY ROBERT YOUNG
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

(Pictures on back page)

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 28—The army air forces today disclosed one of the top secrets of the war—devices for "jamming" enemy radar and making it useless for plane detection and gun aiming.

Counter-radar measures, developed by the radio research laboratory at Harvard university, virtually nullified a billion dollars worth of German radar equipment at crucial stages of the war and kept the Japanese from making effective use of their limited radar installations.

Counter-radar operations confused the German air force during the Normandy invasion and, by depriving the Nazis of their indispensable radar eye for reporting plane positions and firing flak guns, kept allied bomber losses at a minimum.

Aluminum Ribbons Used

A more closely guarded secret until now than radar itself, anti-radar devices are of two general types.

1. Thin strips and ribbons of aluminum foil dropped by the millions from planes.

2. Electronic jammers and detectors operating on the principle of radio interference or static carried by planes and ships.

Radar fundamentally is a system of sending out from a transmitter pulses of radio energy which, when they strike a distant object, such as a plane, bounce back like echoes. These returning radio echoes pass thru a radar receiver onto a screen or scope and show accurately the height, speed, distance, and general characteristics of the target they have struck.

Echoes Are Scrambled

Counter-measures are used first to search for enemy radar installations and locate their position and frequency, then to scramble the returning radio echoes so that they produce only a blurred, distorted picture on the receiving screen, or give inaccurate, misleading information to the enemy radar operator.

The aluminum foil strips look exactly like Christmas tree icicles, except that they are stiffened by creasing so that they will not tangle. Dropped thru the air automatically from moving planes, the strips become tiny radio reflectors. As enemy radar pulses strike the floating bits of foil strong echoes are returned. American scientists found that aluminum foil has the best resonance and that certain lengths return the strongest echoes.

Pictures Are Confusing

A two ounce bundle of 2,000 strips scattered thru the air will return a combined radar echo as strong as that given off by a bomber. Consequently, a group of attacking bombers dropping clouds of anti-radar foil appears in an enemy radar screen as several groups, or, frequently, as a large and confusing mass which gives no indication of the speed and direction of the planes themselves.

By jamming enemy radar reception the strips provide an electronic "smoke screen." Surrounded by the fluttering foil, the planes are protected from radar detection and, therefore, from intercepting enemy fighters and anti-aircraft gunfire.

Sometimes the obscuring foil is in the shape of 400 foot ribbons. These are called "rope," while the small strips are designated descriptively as "chaff." The military code name for strips and ribbon is "window."

Allied air forces dropped an estimated 20 million pounds of these metallic strips and ribbons over Europe—in some areas blanketing the ground like snow. Almost the entire production of aluminum foil in the United States went into counter-radar operations, which explains why cigarets and candy bars

5 KILLED, 18 INJURED AS ARMY TRANSPORT FALLS IN CALIFORNIA

Auburn, Cal., Nov. 28 (AP)—Five men were killed and 18 injured in the crash of a C-47 army transport plane bound from Palm Springs, Cal., to McClellan field, Sacramento, in the Mount Vernon district near here.

Dick Wayland, Associated Press correspondent, reported from the scene of the crash that the 18 injured, some seriously, were being taken to Dewitt General hospital. All the passengers were Japanese-American soldiers.

HURLEY'S BLAST SETS OFF EXPLOSION IN CONGRESS

U. S. IS ADVISED TO FORCE PEACE WITH A-BOMBS

BY WILLIAM MOORE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28—The senate drone over the idealism of the new league of nations was halted today by the booming voice of Sen. Johnson [D., Col.], a towering figure in the senate military affairs committee.

Sen. Johnson

He advised the United States to take its place in the league at once—and then compel the world to accept the American idea of peace, "with vision, guts, and plenty of atomic bombs."

Johnson warned, too, of a danger of war with Russia and gave his plan for avoiding it. He said:

Drifting Toward War

"We are drifting toward war with Russia with certainty and speed. A combination of suspicion, bluff, and appeasement brought on the war with Japan.

"Today we are trying to bluff Russia with conscription of teen age boys, but we are only fooling ourselves. Russia knows we are waving an empty pistol by our conscription prattle, and their contempt for us must grow with each passing hour. Panic action, appeasement, and defeatism must certainly end in disaster.

"Russia is huge and Russia is strong," Johnson went on, "and she respects these qualities in others. I should like to see hundreds of millions of dollars voted by congress for the interchange of Russian and American students.

Wants United States to Stand Up

"And I should like to see the United States stand up to Russia and say in serious dignity:

"'Brother, you haven't a thing on this earth that we covet other than your coöperation, friendship, and good will. But don't make the fatal mistake of pushing us around. We won't take it.'"

Despite the clamor of internationalists for giving control of the atomic bomb to a global organization, Johnson told the obstacles in the way of other nations that may try to manufacture the bomb.

Must Keep Advantage

"We have the jump on the rest of the world in its development and use," he said. "That is the important thing. We should not dissipate and fritter away that significant and tremendous advantage of surrendering its know-how and its formula to any one."

Johnson told his plan for America to force the world to stop fighting, after recalling the hopelessness of the days when secret plans were being laid to make international policemen of American boys. He said:

"And then God Almighty, in His infinite wisdom, dropped the atomic bomb in our lap. It has completely modified all military conception of land, air, and sea defenses.

Can Bomb Any Place

"We have the blueprints for a new airplane with the flying range of 10,000 miles. With the strategic location of air fields from the Philippines to Alaska, on the coast of Asia, from Alaska to Iceland in the arctic circle, and in Dakar and the Azores in the South Atlantic, we can drop, at a moment's notice, atomic bombs on any spot of the earth's surface and return to our base.

"With vision and guts and plenty of atomic bombs, ultra-modern planes, and strategically located air bases, the United States can outlaw the wars of aggression."

Johnson's speech was part of the third day debate over the bill to enable the President to appoint American representatives to the league and give the American representative in the league's security council power to vote the nation into war without consulting congress.

Sen. Taft [R., O.] said he would prefer that congress not give up its war making power. But if it must, he urged that congress require the American representative to vote on the basis of international law and justice, rather than world peace and security.

Wherry Terms Aid to Chinese Reds Near Treason

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28—Senate investigation of American foreign policy and foreign service personnel was assured tonight in the wake of the resignation of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, United States ambassador to China.

Sen. Wherry

Reverberations of the explosive Hurley charge that American diplomats are sabotaging this nation's foreign policy to further the aims of Communists and colonial imperialistic powers echoed from Capitol hill to the White House during the day.

Oratorical guns were unlimbered in both houses of congress. The heaviest barrage was in the senate where investigation by the senate foreign relations committee was promised after a furious debate between Sen. Wherry [R., Neb.] and Sen. Connally [D., Tex.], chairman of the senate committee.

House Heads for Probe

In the meantime, the house was headed toward an investigation of its own. Representatives Gore [D., Tenn.] and Harter [R., Mass.] introduced identical resolutions to set up a special house committee to investigate the foreign service. Representatives Rogers [R., Mass.] and Vorys [R., O.] called for investigation by the house foreign affairs committee.

Other developments in the Hurley resignation, which popped up all around the capital, included:

1. At the state department, Secretary Byrnes promised an investigation of specific complaints made by Hurley against two foreign service officers as he expressed sorrow at the unnecessary resignation of his old friend, holding that Hurley could have returned to China with a free hand.

Hurley Amplifies Charges

2. At the White House, President Truman conferred twice during the day with Gen. Marshall, whom he has named as Hurley's successor.

3. Gen. Hurley elaborated his charges against career diplomats in an address at the National Press club. The war secretary in the Hoover administration, who undertook many confidential missions for President Roosevelt, said he would not have resigned had he been assured earlier of a free hand by Byrnes.

4. Rep. Curtis [R., Neb.] called upon Byrnes to discharge every Communist or near Communist in the state department, naming seven foreign service employes for investigation.

Wherry Starts Rumpus

5. Rep. Dondero [R., Mich] introduced a resolution calling for investigation of six persons charged by the FBI last summer with unlawful use of government secrets. One of the six, John S. Service, was identified by Byrnes as among the career diplomats attacked by Hurley.

The Wherry-Connally exchange, one of the most heated in the history of the senate, was provoked when the Nebraskan stole the ball from Rep. Bridges [R., N. H.], who was preparing to introduce an investigatory resolution and obtained the floor to offer one of his own. Wherry called for a special committee to determine:

1. Whether there is any variance between the present American foreign policy and the Potsdam declaration.

Asks About Conflicts

2. Whether there is any state department interference in domestic affairs of Latin American nations.

3. Whether state department personnel shape or influence other countries toward a communist form of government.

4. Whether any state department personnel have taken actions contrary to American foreign policy.

5. Whether there is any conflict between state department and army and navy policies in any country now occupied by the United States.

In offering his resolution Wherry declared one section of Hurley's charges falls "very little short of treason." Connally lashed at Wherry for suggesting the foreign relations committee was not "entirely capable" of conducting any investigation necessary.

Connally said some senators have "a mania for special investigations." He expressed amazement that Wherry would agree with Hurley's "dramatic presentation," finding evidence of "curious preparation" in Hurley's charges and asserting that it appeared to him "a little ungrateful" that an ambassador of such "high standing" should resign his "great station in a moment of "anger and pique."

Connally said he would "welcome" an investigation adding that he would like to see Hurley come up to the foreign relations committee and "look us in the eye and tells us of treachery and things of that kind."

Need House Cleaning

Wherry retorted that he did not intend to provoke a political furor, but added that Connally had come to his defense in his "jocular and hula-dance fashion" in asking for an investigation.

"I tell you," he shouted, "we need a house cleaning in the state department of those who are trying to run it contrary to the policy of the President of the United States.

"You should be the first to want to bare the dark secrets of the state department to the American people. Why shouldn't we weed these people out?"

He accused Connally of attempting to "laugh and chortle" the investigation off.

The exchange ended when Wherry asked: "Will you give us the investigation?"

"Yes," Connally replied.

At his press conference Byrnes disclosed that Hurley had complained specifically to him about the activities of George Atcheson Jr., former counsellor of the embassy at Chungking, and Service, former diplomatic secretary in the embassy. Atcheson is now in Tokyo as diplomatic adviser to Gen. MacArthur and Service is one of his assistants.

Atcheson Report Cited

Byrnes said Hurley objected to a report which Atcheson sent the department from Chungking while Hurley was in the United States on leave. In that report, Byrnes said, Atcheson outlined a plan to promote unity in China. Hurley found statements in it to which he objected on the basis of policy, Byrnes said. He added he will invesitgate the cases of Atcheson and Service.

Earlier in the day the state department disclosed that 10 of its career diplomats were removed from Chungking at the insistence of Hurley. Three of these were disclosed to be in the Chinese affairs division —Arthur R. Ringwalt, assistant chief of division; Edward Rice and Fulton Freeman are now working here. In a statement issued on his resignation Hurley had charged that men he had removed were returned to the state department and made his supervisors.

Two others are in Moscow. They are Thorace H. Smith, first secretary of the United States embassy, and John Davies Jr., second secretary.

Scoffs at Charges

Byrnes said he found no evidence to support the Hurley charges, but would, nonetheless, make an investigation. He expressed astonishment at the charges of his old friend, insisting the resignation came as a surprise to him. Byrnes implied he attached little importance to the violent denunciation of the state department.

In his speaking appearance at the National Press club Hurley again slashed at the career diplomats. He insisted there is no question but that Russia supports the announced American policy of unifying anti-Japanese elements in China and upholding Chinese aspirations for democracy.

Most of Hurley's talk was a repetition of the heated charges he made yesterday. However, he did defend the presence of American troops in China until one and two million Japanese soldiers still there are repatriated and the country has been stabilized.

Asks Probe of Seven

In calling for a purge of state department Communists, Rep. Curtis named seven persons as worthy of investigation by the federal bureau of investigation. These are, in addition to Service, Towena Rommel, Alger Hiss, Emile Despres, John Carter Vincent, Abraham H. Feller and Benjamin. He did not detail the duties of the employes.

Dondero listed the six persons accused of conspiring to remove government secrets unlawfully as Service, Emmanuel S. Larsen, former state department specialist in far eastern affairs; Andrew Roth, a former navy lieutenant; Mark Gayn, a free lance writer; Kate Louise Mitchell, a co-editor of Amer-Asia magazine, an alleged Communist publication, and Philip Jaffe, editor of the magazine.

Three of Six Released

The Michigan congressman expressed the indignation that three of the six were released and two paid small fines. He did not have reliable information on the fate of the six. Of those released Service was restored to active duty and assigned to China, where he incurred the wrath of Hurley.

Dondero scouted the allegation, advanced by friends of the six, that the secret files they obtained had not been used to the injury of the United States. He made public the contents of some of the top secret documents listing a navy compilation of the disposition of the Japanese fleet before the battle of the Philippines and a secret report on the far east.

"Let me give one more example which is particularly illuminating and of present great importance to our policy in China," Dondero said. "This stolen document was a lengthy detailed report showing complete disposition of the units in the army of Chiang Kai-shek.

"It is easy to visualize the consequences of this information in the hands of the communist forces in China, then and now. Is it possible that this information reached the headquarters of the communist forces in China, enabling them to arrive at strategic places at the opportune time to accept the surrender of Japanese arms to serve their own purposes."

Seeking Divorce

MRS. KATHERINE THOMSON

West Palm Beach, Fla., Nov. 28—(AP)—Katherine Rawls Thomson, former world's champion swimming star, filed suit for divorce today from her aviator-husband, Theodore H. Thomson.

Two years ago Thomson filed a divorce action but later withdrew it.

The latest action was filed in Circuit court by Julian E. Ross, Mrs. Thomson's attorney, and charges cruel and inhuman treatment which, the petition states, was of "a physical kind sufficient to cause bodily injury and to put the plaintiff in fear of her life."

Mrs. Thomson added that after her husband withdrew his divorce action in November, 1943 he "promised to do better, but did not."

PRICE BLAMES REICH DISORDER ON FRENCH ACTS

BY WILLIAM STRAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 — Byron Price, former director of the office of censorship, today placed the blame for current allied occupation difficulties in Germany upon the French thirst for revenge.

Byron Price

In a report to President Truman on his recent special mission to the Reich, Price urged the nation to reexamine its military government policies in the light of experience since the Nazi capitulation. The study, he said, should include inquiry into the advisability of revising the Potsdam declaration which committed the United States to many of its present policies.

The former censorship chieftain was sent to Germany under the President's personal auspices to make a survey of the relationship between the American forces of occupation and the German people.

Praises Eisenhower

Praising Gen. Eisenhower and his staff for their work in governing the German population in the American zone, Price asserted bluntly that obstructions raised by the French government have deadlocked the four power control council in Berlin, thereby imperiling the underlying purposes of allied policy. The United States must decide whether this condition is to be permitted to continue, he declared.

The nation must also decide, the report continued, whether it means to finish the occupation job competently . . . or wthdraw; and whether it is going to permit starvation, with attendant epidemics and disorders, in the American zone, or ship the food to prevent it.

"As a result of the French attitude," Price charged, "Germany is not being treated as an economic unit. Instead, what is happening amounts, to speak plainly, to the economic dismemberment of Germany. This is a reversal of the basic objectives and, I believe, a certain step toward international friction.

Nurse New Hatreds

Describing the progress of the occupation in the American zone, he asserted that the job so far has been better than good. Relations with the mass of Germans are on a sound basis, he continued, and in no other zone has greater progress been made toward the avowed objectives of allied occupation.

Summarizing his findings on the condition of the German people, Price spoke warningly of the dire consequences of their bitterness as their plight becomes more desperate. He said:

"There can be no question that the vengeance of nature's God lies heavily on the German people. They are paying in kind for the unparralleled miseries and cruelties for which they are responsible.

"There is plenty of evidence that the Germans are nursing old and new hatreds with mounting bitterness as their situation becomes more desperate; that they are listening hourly, with traditional credulity, for the voice of whatever type of new leader desperation may produce.

"Intelligence reports indicate clearly that all our propaganda effort to instill a sense of collective German guilt has fallen flat."

Hirohito Trial Up to Prosecutor

Leave Saturday

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Whether Emperor Hirohito will be tried as a war criminal will be decided after Joseph B. Keenan, chief prosecutor of the Japanese war criminals, reaches Tokyo, Keenan said in a broadcast tonight.

Former Japanese Premier Tojo, his associates, and predecessors, will find themselves in the prisoners' dock, Keenan said. He added:

"Whether we will reach to the very, very top will be decided when we get there."

Keenan and his assistants will leave for Japan Saturday.

He estimated the work of his group would take at least four or five months.

Formed Allied Policy

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Dr. H. V. Evatt, Australian foreign minister, announced today that the far eastern advisory commission virtually had completed its task of defining the allied policy toward Japan. The commission, he said, will leave for Tokyo Dec. 26 for a personal inspection.

"It is clear that the commission will determine the general lines of allied policies in Japan," he said in a statement, "subject to the necessary reserve power of the supreme commander, in whose hands must continue the primary responsibility for execution of policy."

Evatt is chairman of the policy committee.

JAP TELLS HOW HE BEHEADED AMERICAN FLYER

KWAJALEIN, Nov. 27 [Delayed] —(AP)—A Japanese naval officer with 27 years' service, on trial for his life, said today he never had been advised of the Geneva convention regulating treatment of war prisoners. The officer was Lt. Kyoshi Fueta, commander of the north naval sector of Mili atoll, one of 10 Japanese officers on trial here accused of beheading five American flyers in February of 1944.

Warrant Officer Tatanichi Manako, confessed executioner of one of the flyers—whose identities have not been disclosed—testified he cut off one flyer's head on orders from Fueta.

"To pay respect to the American flyer who was about to die and become a god," Manako said, "I stopped to change into clean clothes before the execution." Upon arriving at the scene of execution, Manako testified, he had the American "button and straighten" his uniform.

"I then took seven steps backward," he continued. "I drew my sword with my right hand and bowed respectively to the American. I then poured water on the blade of my sword to purify it, stepped up to the American, and cut off his head with a single stroke."

HOUSE APPROVES 158 MILLION FOR VETS' HOSPITALS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—The house today tentatively restored to the deficiency appropriations bill $158,320,000 for veterans hospitals.

The house appropriations committee had stricken the item pending further study and possible use by the veterans administration of surplus army and navy hospitals.

The requested funds provide $23,460,674 for completion of the regular construction program proposed for the current fiscal year and $134,859,326 for an additional hospital construction program. The supplementary appropriation of $134,859,326 provides for construction of 19 new hospitals and additions to 20 existing hospitals.

Included in the list submitted by the veterans administration were: [Location, number of beds, type, and estimated cost]:

New hospitals at Decatur, Ill., 250, G. M. and S., $2,768,258; and Iowa City, Ia., 500, G. M. and S., $3,756,784.

'HITLER'S MIND GONE,' SAYS PHOTOGRAPHER FRIEND HOFFMAN

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP)—Heinrich Hoffman, Hitler's personal photographer, today said that Martin Bormann had him falsely labeled as a typhus carrier last January to prevent him from going to Hitler to "tell him the truth" about Germany's approaching doom. He said he finally saw Hitler, but that Hitler's "mind was gone."

"I decided to go to Hitler's headquarters to tell him the truth that, goaded by Himmler, Bormann, and Goebbels, he was driving Germany to destruction," Hoffman said. "But Bormann [Hitler's deputy] always hated me. When I cabled for clearance to visit the fuehrer, back came a telegram saying I was a typhus carrier and under no circumstances was to be permitted to approach Hitler.

"I was in Vienna at the time. I knew Bormann had done this. I went to one of the biggest clinics in Vienna and obtained a certificate after exhaustive tests disproving the allegation, and with this I was finally able to get to the fuehrer. It was too late. The moment I saw Hitler I realized his mind was gone."

JAP PREMIER'S SPEECH ASSAILED BY NEWSPAPERS

TOKYO, Nov. 29 [Thursday]—(AP)—The Japanese press today sharply criticized Premier Kijuro Shidehara's state of the nation speech to the diet and further heckling of the premier appeared likely when interpellations are resumed this afternoon in the house of representatives. Derisive laughter greeted Shidehara when he addressed the representatives yesterday.

The newspaper Yomiuri Hochi said the premier's speech thruout showed "apparent lack of complete recognition of Japan's defeat and the cabinet's unsuitability to the times. The people are very unfortunate to go thru such difficult times as these with such a government leader."

The newspaper Asahi said the speech merely recapitulated the country's troubles when the people wanted to hear concrete plans for solving them.

Paris Boat Train Again Puffs Out to Le Havre

APPOINTMENT OF MARSHALL GOOD SIGN: CHUNGKING

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 28 (AP) —Gen. Marshall's diplomatic assignment to Chungking was "well received" officially today and foreign quarters saw it as a beam of hope breaking thru the darkening clouds of civil war.

Most foreign quarters said Marshall's mission was a clear affirmation that the United States would not view with favor any attempt to break off Manchuria, Inner Mongolia, or Sinkiang from China by civil war or connivance.

However, the reaction among GI's in Shanghai was less enthusiastic.

"Looks like we'll be here a long time," said one enlisted man. "They aren't sending Marshall out here to take us home."

The appointment came at a time when the Nationalist cause in Manchuria was taking a brighter turn with a report of a new Russian agreement permitting air borne landings at the Manchurian capital of Changchun and the industrial city of Mukden to the south.

WANTS HURLEY'S STORY BEFORE HELPING UNRRA

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Rep. Vorys [R., O.] proposed today that Patrick J. Hurley be called as a witness by the house foreign affairs committee before congress takes any further action on new funds for the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration.

This committee recently approved a bill to authorize an additional $1,350,000,000 appropriation for UNRRA work.

But Vorys today wrote Chairman Bloom [D., N. Y.] of the foreign affairs committee that "in view of the revelations Gen. Hurley has made he should be called as a witness before the foreign affairs committee before the second UNRRA authorization bill comes to the floor."

Bloom told reporters later he had received Vory's letter, but he did not plan to follow the suggestion. However, the rules committee delayed action on the $1,350,000,000 bill. This group must give its approval before the bill can go to the house floor.

RAPE OF AUSTRIA BY NAZIS TOLD IN WAR CRIME TRIAL

Seyss-Inquart Pictured as 'First Quisling'

Donovan Quits

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP)—Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor at the war crimes trial, announced today that Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan, his associate in preparation for the trial of 20 Nazi leaders, was leaving the prosecution staff to return to law practice in New York. Donovan formerly was chief of the office of strategic services [OSS].

[A Reuters dispatch said that "on high authority it was learned that Donovan, who was in charge of 'visual evidence' for the prosecution staff, intended to resign as a protest against the way the prosecution is being conducted."]

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP)—A tale of cold, studied treachery accusing German leaders and their Austrian "quisling," Arthur Seyss-Inquart, of engineering the conquest of Austria was unfolded today before the international war crimes tribunal.

Rudolf Hess

The American prosecution, methodically weaving a web of evidence to prove the 20 Nazi defendants guilty of planning aggression, introduced document after document on Nazi plots to undermine the independence of their little neighbor.

The two defendants singled out as the chief architects of the anschluss [union] were Seyss-Inquart and Franz von Papen, both of whom listened attentively—and apparently uncomfortably—as Assistant United States Prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman read into the record their own boastful words as evidence against them.

Hess Reading 12th Book

Sharing the spotlight with them was former Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess, who continued reading his 12th book in the courtroom as the tribunal announced that a board of psychiatrists had found he was "not insane" in a strict sense of the word, but conceded his loss of memory would "interfere with his ability to make his defense."

The tribunal will decide on Friday what his status will be.

Alderman devoted almost the day to presentation of evidence on the German plot to swallow up Austria. Into the record went a declaration Von Papen made in 1934, soon after he arrived in Vienna as German minister, saying:

"Southeastern Europe to Turkey is Germany's hinterland and I have been designated to carry thru the task of bringing it within the fold. Austria is first on the program."

Affidavits by Messersmith

The statement was attributed to Von Papen in one of two affidavits by George S. Messersmith, now United States ambassador to Mexico, who in 1934 was American minister to Austria. The defense failed in an effort to bar Messersmith's affidavits, but scored finally in a fight to compel at least some of their accusers to appear as witnesses if their evidence is to be considered.

The latter fight was based on efforts of the prosecution to introduce an affidavit by Kurt Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor who was unseated by the Nazis just before the anschluss. The court upheld defense objections and ruled that Schuschnigg was present in Nuernberg and, therefore, could be summoned by either the prosecution or the defense if his testimony is desired.

"Creator of Anschluss"

Von Papen's genius as a slick engineer of fifth column activities was portrayed in a letter, introduced by the American prosecution, which Von Papen wrote Hitler on May 17, 1935, outlining a plan to trick Schuschnigg into accepting Austrian Nazis in the government.

Alderman, calling Seyss-Inquart the "original quisling," introduced a letter to Seyss-Inquart from Friedl Rainer, former gauleiter of Salzburg, describing the defendant as the "one man creator of the anschluss."

Rainer also wrote that the decision for the nazi putsch of July, 1934, in which Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was assassinated, was "right, but the execution was faulty." As a result, Rainer said, Hitler sent Von Papen to Austria and adopted a new method of political penetration.

'TIGER' DENIES ALL IN COURT FIGHT FOR LIFE

Asserts He Never Heard of Atrocities

BY ROBERT CROMIE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, Nov. 29 [Thursday]—Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita ended his defense in his war crimes trial today with a general denial that he was responsible for the atrocities he is accused of condoning.

In a concluding speech from the witness chair the "Tiger of Malaya" told the military tribunal trying him:

"The matters referred to in the charges I have known for the first time thru witnesses in this court. If such acts were committed by my subordinates it was in complete disregard of my own ideas, and if such acts did occur I feel they occurred at such a time and place that I could not have known of them beforehand.

"I have never ordered such things and I have never condoned such actions nor have I ever recognized such actions. If I had known in advance I would have taken every possible means to halt them. If I had found out about them afterwards, I would have punished them to the fullest extent of military law."

Denies Ordering Torture

Under questioning by Col. Harry E. Clarke, chief of defense counsel, Yamashita previously told of ordering close relations and coöperation with the Filipinos and denied that he had ever ordered or authorized his military police to torture any one to get information.

"Did you have any reports of military police using methods of torture?" Clarke asked. "I had no such report from anywhere," Yamashita replied.

"Did you authorize the military police to execute suspected guerrillas?" asked Clarke. "Absolutely not," the general said.

Asked about a letter he wrote to the military police commending them, Yamashita said: "I sent a letter of praise once when the Kempei Tai last November discovered explosives under the officers' mess at my headquarters at Fort McKinley in time to prevent serious damage. They also found an entrenchment between McKinley and Nielson field with a machine gun and a small radio set in it and in a bamboo grove near Fort McKinley about 100 rifles and a large quantity of hand grenades."

Traces Military Career

Yamashita said he had met Gen. Ricarte, Filipino exile, three times. "Did you ever tell him you had issued or intended to issue an order for the extermination of the Filipino people?" Clarke asked. "I definitely did not and if you consider it from a common sense point of view, killing 18 million Filipinos would be an unthinkable matter," the general said.

On cross examination by Maj. Robert Kerr of Portland, Ore., prosecution chief, Yamashita traced his military career briefly and denied that he came secretly to the Philippines in 1942 to take over command from Gen. Homma who was the Japanese commanding general at the time of the Bataan death march.

Visited Manila

Yamashita admitted having visited Manila seven or eight times, but told Kerr he had never seen civilians mistreated, tied to posts, or arrested.

Yamashita also denied he had ever visited a prisoner of war compound at Fort McKinley or ever visited other parts of the Philippines. He said he had sent members of his staff to Leyte only, never to other parts in the Philippines.

In testimony yesterday Yamashita insisted he had not even heard of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines and asserted:

He had ordered the evacuation of Manila, but naval troops failed to obey this order.

He had never issued orders to destroy Manila.

He had ordered the same good treatment given American prisoners as was given in the Jap army.

The only report he received of any violation of the laws of war was one from Tokyo requesting that he investigate alleged mistreatment of Spanish civilians, which he at-

AMERY GIVEN DEATH SENTENCE BY BRITAIN IN 8 MINUTE TRIAL

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP)—In an eight minute trial, John Amery, 33, German radio propagandist and son of Leopold Amery, a former secretary of state for India, pleaded guilty today to charges of high treason and treachery and was sentenced to death.

Amery was accused of making broadcasts asking England to seek a truce, and of having been chosen by the Germans to lead a provisional British government after the projected invasion.

He answered with a firm "No" when asked if he could state any reason why the court should not pronounce sentence of death, and declined to make a final statement. The judge then passed sentence. Amery bowed, turned sharply and walked without faltering down the stone steps leading to the Old Bailey cells.

KEEP UP A-BOMB OUTPUT 2 MORE YEARS: GROVES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Maj. Gen. L. R. Groves, head of the Manhattan engineers project which developed the atomic bomb, recommended today that manufacture of the explosives be continued until we have "sufficient" bombs on hand and a decision is reached on control of the weapon.

Groves was questioned for two hours by the senate atomic energy committee, which is studying measures to control use of atomic energy.

Groves told the committee the bomb plants in Tennessee, Washington, and New Mexico should be operated at present capacity for a couple of years to build up our stockpile of bombs. After that, it may be possible to reduce the magnitude of the operations somewhat, he said.

Cost 500 Million Yearly

When questioned about the cost of peace time operations, he estimated it would be a little less than $500,000,000 a year. He said he had not yet prepared detailed estimates and hoped congress wouldn't hold him to his snap judgment.

He also testified that lack of control over development and use of atomic energy would mean "national suicide."

He said a special commission independent of any other government agency should be given complete authority over all activities in the atomic field, subject only to approval of congress and the President.

Approves Control Plan

He said he approves "essentially" the principle of control announced Nov. 15 by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister King. [Their plan calls for creation of a commission to recommend control principles to the allied nations; pending the development of effective safeguards against destructive use of atomic energy, they would not disclose specialized information regarding its practical application.]

He asserted that reliance on an international inspection system to prevent the manufacture of atomic weapons would be "hopeless" and "impossible unless you could go into every factory or home without notice or warrant. I would not want any part of it."

The general sketched an imaginary view of the city of Washington after the dropping of one atomic bomb in the "federal triangle" of government buildings.

There would be nothing much left in an area two miles in diameter, he said. The completely ruined section would extend from the capitol on the east, past the White House, to the national cathedral on the west.

Groves reiterated what other atomic experts have said—there is no specific defense against the atomic bomb. Some might be detonated in the air by high powered anti-aircraft artillery, but some would get thru.

Must Control Political Power

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Government control of atomic energy means that America faces an "unlimited government armed with unlimited power" of production, destruction, and compulsion, Virgil Jordan, president of the national industrial conference board, said today.

"The most difficult and dangerous problem that faces us today is the control of the unlimited political power which threatens to destroy the freedom which unlimited atomic power promises us," he said in an address prepared for the 19th annual meeting of the Cotton-Textile institute.

GREW BATTLES TO KEEP DIARY FROM PROBERS

Report It Contains Hints of Jap Intentions

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28—Hints that sensational evidence of Japanese war intentions prior to the Pearl Harbor attack is contained in the 13-volume personal diary of Joseph C. Grew, former ambassador to Japan, today brought threats of legal action to make the document available to the congressional Pearl Harbor investigating committee.

Joseph C. Grew

Other highlights of today's session of the committee, at which Grew was the only witness, included:

1. A decision to summon Gen. George C. Marshall, retired army chief of staff, as a witness before he leaves for China as President Truman's personal envoy.

Grew Destroyed Codes

2. A revelation by Grew that he had destroyed some of the Tokyo embassy's diplomatic codes a few days before the Pearl Harbor attack.

3. A demand from Rep. Keefe [R., Wis.] that all messages between President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill during the two weeks prior to the attack be given the committee.

4. Introduction of evidence indicating that most South American republics were fully informed that Japan intended to open war against the United States in 1941.

Grew has spent eight hours this week in the committee's witness chair, most of it under cross examination, and will be recalled tomorrow morning. Former State Secretary Hull, whose failing health limits his appearances before the committee, also may be heard. A heavy rainstorm prevented his attendance today.

Marshall Consulted

Previous committee plans for Gen. Marshall to testify, made before the unexpected developments caused by yesterday's resignation of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley as ambassador to China, had not called for his appearance for several weeks.

Shortly before the committee adjourned today, Sen. Brewster [R., Me.] asked Sen. Barkley [D., Ky.], committee chairman, if a decision on Marshall's appearance had been reached. Barkley replied Marshall was being consulted in the matter. It is expected he will testify next week.

Crew revealed the destruction of the diplomatic codes while being questioned by Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.]. He said he had received no specific orders from Washington in the matter but the procedure was a usual one when a break in diplomatic relations appears imminent. Grew said the remainder of the codes were destroyed after the war started.

Expansion of War

During Grew's testimony this week, he has told of his efforts to warn the state department and President Roosevelt that Japan was preparing to expand its war of aggression and that, judging from her past behavior, might make surprise attacks. He also has revealed his advice to Washington more than a year before Pearl Harbor to "get tough" with Japan thru economic sanctions.

Altho Grew has insisted that his published writings and official documents of the state department tell the whole story, some members of the investigating committee believe that additional information revealing information on Japanese intentions to President Roosevelt and other high government officials, will be found in the former ambassador's diary.

It was learned authoritatively today that Republican members of the committee want to see Grew's diary because testimony thus far has not indicated he warned the state department in precise terms that Japan was planning to strike without warning.

Hull Refusal Reported

Details of such warnings were said to have been in a blistering report Grew wrote on his return to Washington in August, 1942, but which Hull is reported to have refused to receive. Grew testified today he had reported to Hull from notes which have been destroyed. Data for the reported written report is believed to be in Grew's diary.

Grew reiterated today his assertion yesterday that his diary is personal, contains entries which are "misleading," and that much of its contents have been proved inconsistent by subsequent events.

Brewster asked Grew if he would turn his diary over to Committee Counsel William D. Mitchell and permit Mitchell to select any data the counsel thought the committee should have. Before Grew could answer, Mitchell demurred, saying he was "honor bound" to give committee members any evidence he had and that he would be embarrassed by having to select items.

Right of Subpena

Mitchell said court action might be necessary to determine whether Grew has the right to withhold the document. Barkley then said the committee has the right to subpena such records and that it was up to the group to decide whether such a course should be adopted.

Ferguson, in an interview, said the subpena of Grew's diary should be a last resort to be taken only if the state department will not provide the information wanted by the committee. He declared, however, he would not hesitate to ask for a subpena despite Grew's protests that the diary is personal.

The minority members' battle to obtain vital documents was opened on another front by Keefe when he asked Mitchell to request of the state, war, and navy departments copies of all correspondence between Roosevelt and Churchill for the period from Nov. 24 to Dec. 7, 1941.

Calls File "Incomplete"

"It is obvious we do not have a complete file of the Roosevelt-Churchill correspondence before us," Keefe said, referring to the Nov. 26 and Nov 29, 1941, messages from Churchill to the late President in which the British leader asked for a warlike declaration to congress and expressed concern of the trickle of aid to China.

"I also ask," Keefe said, "that the custodian of the papers of the Roosevelt estate [Miss Grace Tully, who was Mr. Roosevelt's personal secretary] produce all communications between Roosevelt and Churchill for the period mentioned, together with a certificate attesting that all such messages have been produced."

Mitchell, promising Keefe to ask for the material requested, said that Miss Tully will be a witness at a later date.

Admiralty-Navy Records

Ferguson reminded Mitchell he had asked for all messages between the British admiralty and our navy department in 1940 and 1941. Mitchell said the task necessitated the search of 375,000 documents and that he had asked the navy to start with Dec. 7, 1941, and work backward.

Gen. Marshall is expected to be one of the most important witnesses summoned to the inquiry into American unpreparedness against the Japanese attack on our Pacific outpost. The army board of inquiry criticized him severely for failure to advise his deputies of the critical situation in the Pacific so that they might act intelligently in his absence.

Marshall also was criticized for failing to keep Maj. Gen. Short, Iawaiian commander, fully informed of the international situation. He also was blamed for the delay in getting information to Short on Dec. 6 and 7 that Japan was presenting an ultimatum to the White House at 1 p. m. Dec. 7 [Washington time] approximately the hour of the attack.

Possible Hostile Action

The general also took no action in regard to Short's reply on Nov. 28, 1941, to the army's warning of possible hostile action which noted only that he was placing his command on the alert against sabotage.

Today's evidence concerning the South American republics' being informed of Japanese intentions toward the United States came in the form of reports from American ambassadors in those countries in 1941 that Japan was trying to determine the South American nations' attitude should war occur between the United States and Japan.

Japan was told, the ambassadors' reports showed, that the southern nations would form a united front against Japan if that nation attacked the United States.

The first report of Japanese diplomatic tactics came from American Ambassador R. Henry Norweb in Peru April 4. It said the Japanese minister had been told by the Peruvian foreign minister that "all" American republics would fight Japan if she attacked the United States. Norweb said the Peruvian "obviously enjoyed" breaking the news to the Japanese envoy.

From Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Ambassador Caffery reported on June 9, 1941, that the Japanese ambassador had put the question to President Vargas of Brazil and had been told if Japan attacked the United States she would be "declaring war upon Brazil, also."

Dined in Panama

Representatives of Costa Rica, Cuba, Colombia, and Venezuela were dined in Panama on Nov. 3, 1941, by the Japanese minister, but he was told the same story given the Japanese in other South American countries, the Dominican legation in Panama reported.

Three days before Pearl Harbor, Dec. 4, 1941, the state department was advised by Ambassador Bowers in Santiago, Chile, that the Japanese minister had informed Chile "war is almost inevitable" and asked that Japanese in Panama be permitted to come to Chile. The request was refused.

Also placed in evidence today as a telegram from Bern, Switzerland, dated Sept. 11, 1941, in which the Swiss intelligence service was reported as saying Japan would enter the war within a month. It added: "With Japan in the war, Germans figure the United States will be occupied in the Pacific and will be unable to send expedition to Dakar [on the African west coast]."

Submitted to Magazine

Keefe, during his examination of Grew at the afternoon session, established the fact that Grew had submitted his diary to Colliers' magazine for publication in the fall of 1942. He tried to determine whether the state department had ordered deletions from the document prior to publication, and that Colliers' thereupon refused to publish it.

"The entire diary was not submitted," Grew asserted. "I just didn't go ahead with the matter . . . probably because I was extremely busy at the time and later decided to publish a book with the material."

The firm of Simon and Schuster undertook publication of the book, Grew said. The diary was turned over to Quincy Howell, of the firm's editorial staff, while the manuscript was being prepared.

Keefe asked Grew if he objected to Howell's being called as a witness to testify on the diary's contents. Grew said he did because the diary was a personal document.

Reminder by Barkley

Barkley again reminded Grew that regardless of his views, the committee could decide whether it should have the diary.

Later, Keefe asked that Stanley Hornbeck, former chief of the state department's far eastern office, later political adivser to the state department, and now ambassador to Holland, be summoned to testify at the inquiry.

Turning quickly to Grew, Keefe asked, "Is Dr. Hornbeck mentioned in your diary?"

Grew's face reddened, then he laughed and said, "I have no recollection."

"I'll try to refresh your recollection at the proper time," Keefe declared.

[Adm. J. O. Richardson, former Pacific fleet commander, in testimony early in the hearing said Hornbeck apparently had more to do with the disposition of the fleet in 1940 than any other man in Washington.]

Keefe questioned Grew about what he termed the "Dooman incident," which, he said, was a statement in 1940 by Eugene H. Dooman, then counselor in our Tokyo embassy, to a Japanese foreign office official that the United States would fight Japan if Japan attacked the British naval base at Singapore.

Approved Statement

Grew said he had approved Dooman's statement as a means of persuading Japan to abandon her war aims in the Pacific. The impression had been created in Japan, he said, that America was "isolationist, pacifistic, and too divided to fight a war." The controled press played up anti-war speeches and strikes in the United States, he said.

"Dooman was in the United States during the 1940 Presidential campaign," Keefe said. "Were his speeches played up in Japan?"

"I cannot recollect," said Grew.

"Well," Keefe asserted, "during that campaign there were a lot of speeches by nonisolationists, including the President himself, indicating that we did not intend to fight a foreign war."

JUST A COINCIDENCE! WAR INQUIRY WILL RECESS ON GAME DAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28—Remarking gravely that his announcement had "absolutely no connection" with the Army-Navy football game at Philadelphia next Saturday, Chairman Barkley [D., Ky.] of the Pearl Harbor investigating committee, today announced that there would be no committee session that day. Happy smiles appeared on the faces of military and naval personnel who make up two-thirds of the attendance at the hearings.

DUTCH NAZI MUSSERT DUPED BY HITLER, PROSECUTION SHOWS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Nov. 28—Anton Mussert, Dutch Nazi leader on trial for treason, was portrayed today by a special government prosecutor as a bellwether who led thousands of his people into the German fold but who was merely a dupe of Hitler.

Before a special court, the prosecutor disclosed that seized documents showed Hitler never intended to appoint Mussert to a responsible position because Germany intended the complete annexation of the Netherlands. Altho Hitler received the Dutch quisling three times in Berlin, according to the prosecutor, he merely kept him on the hook to entice Dutchmen to join the German war machine. Mussert was nominal head of the Netherlands while actual administration was left in the hands of Arthur Seyss-Inquart. The death penalty was demanded for Mussert.

The prosecution also disclosed that Fritz Schmidt, German propaganda administrator to the Netherlands, and a friend of Mussert, was murdered in 1942 on his way to Paris by the Gestapo on Heinrich Himmler's order.

TRUMAN NAMES HALSEY 5 STAR FLEET ADMIRAL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—President Truman today nominated Adm. Halsey for promotion to the five star rank of admiral of the fleet.

Halsey recently relinquished command of the 3d fleet. At that time he said he intended to retire. Halsey, who requested retirement "to give the young fellows a chance," reported to the navy department today for temporary duty pending retirement.

The law establishing the five star rank authorized appointment of four naval officers as admirals of the fleet. Only three were named—Adm. King, chief of naval operations who will retire shortly; Adm. Nimitz, former commander of the Pacific fleet, who will suceed Adm. King, and Adm. Leahy, chief of staff to President Truman.

AP CHANGES ITS BY-LAWS UNDER RULING OF COURT

Members Vote Approval of 4 Applications

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Members of of the Associated Press today amended the association's by-laws to eliminate consideration of competitive factors in voting upon applicants for membership.

The amendment was in conformity with a federal court decree in a civil anti-trust action brought by the government against the Associated Press. The ruling was affirmed by the Supreme court.

Meeting in special session at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, the members voted on the membership applications of four newspapers, whose election was recommended by the board of directors.

One of the applicants, Marshall Field of the Chicago Sun, asked for an associate membership and the night news report instead of a regular membership he requested earlier.

Can't Conform to By-Laws

He said he could not conform to the by-laws required for regular membership because of contractual relations by which the Chicago Sun had agreed to furnish news of Chicago origin to the United Press. The Sun was voted the associate membership, 949 to 34.

The three other newspapers elected to regular membership, and the votes, included: Oakland, Cal., Post-Inquirer, an evening newspaper, 965 to 21; the Washington, D. C., Times Herald, a morning and evening newspaper, 962 to 23, and the Detroit, Mich., Times, an evening newspaper, 965 to 21.

The motion to elect the four applicants was made by Paul Bellamy of the Cleveland Plain Dealer and seconded by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Wording of Provision

The amended by-laws concerning admission of members include this provision:

"In voting upon an application for membership, whether such voting be by the members or by the board of directors, no member or director shall take into consideration in passing upon such application the effect of his or its admission upon the ability of such applicant to compete with members in the same city and field." [Morning, evening or Sunday.]

Albert Dear Jr., of the Jersey City [N. J.] Journal called this provision "a dishonest by-law, declaring "the court has asked the AF to do something dishonest."

He said a member voting upon the admission of an applicant for membership could not avoid considering the possible competitive effect of that applicant.

Basic Structure the Same

Dear cast a lone "no" vote for the by-law, but when the by-laws were voted in their entirety he voted "aye" with other members.

Following adoption of the by-law amendments, Col. McCormick presented a resolution urging congress to amend anti-trust laws so that any press service would not be prohibited from "exercising its own discretion in the selection of its customers or from furnishing its press services on the express or implied condition, agreement, or understanding not to furnish the press services which it is furnishing to a customer to any other newspaper or newspapers in the community of the customer."

In introducing the resolution, Col. McCormick said he was presenting some 500-odd proxies in support of it.

Call for Meeting

However, Roy Roberts of the Kansas City Star said that consideration of the resolution was not in order since only business specified in the call for the special meeting could be taken up at the meeting.

Roberts said members at Kansas City and Oklahoma meetings had instructed him and E. K. Gaylord of the Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times to present the views of three states — Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma—chiefly that passage of the resolution now would be unwise.

"The folks out there will not oppose it if and when the time comes to get the relief Mr. McCormick asks," said Roberts. "But they felt it would be unwise at this time. They thought it would be better to get our house in order now—to get the injunction lifted from the AP."

Col. McCormick, replying that "the one thing we want is unanimity," said he had felt that if the matter were not brought to the attention of the members now it would be dropped.

Basic Form Unchanged

Roberts suggested the resolution be held for consideration at the April meeting and Col. McCormick agreed.

The board of directors, in recommending approval of the by-laws, said in a report read by Robert McLean of the Philadelphia Bulletin, AP president, that "the basic form and structure of the organization remains unchanged."

The report said of the court decision:

"Individually, the board as laymen desire to record their unanimous belief that the decision of both the lower court and that of the Supreme court sustaining it constitute an unmistakable assumption of legislative powers by the judiciary.

"The Associated Press is not a monopoly nor does it tend to become a monopoly. What the Associated Press was charged with was that its product is so superior that its service is essential to a successful newspaper—and on this charge it was convicted."

The amendments retained the two classes of membership, regular and associate. Regular membership is limited to those engaged in publication of newspapers. As under present by-laws, associate members may not vote, nor share in the assets of the corporation, nor may their representatives hold office.

Other Classes of Users

Associate members need not be limited to those engaged in the publication of newspapers. The new amendments contain this provision: "Other classes of users of news may be held eligible for associate membership by resolution of the regular members and those within such approved classes may then be elected to associate membership."

The directors said they would recommend to the annual meeting in April "that the membership approve the eligibility of radio stations as a class for associate membership as well as those publications receiving a report in an exchange of news arrangement."

The board said that when the AP had fulfilled the requirements of the court decree it would consult with the department of justice "for the purpose of proposing a motion to the District court for the lifting of the permanent injunction" intended to enforce compliance with its decree.

Col. McCormick, in his remarks seconding the motion for election of the four applicants to membership, said:

"I am going to second the motion of Mr. Bellamy and in doing so I wish to clear up any doubt in the minds of members as to the history of this whole transaction. It must be said for Mr. Field that the attack upon the Associated Press did not originate with him, but with the department of justice.

Recalls Earlier Meeting

"Before Mr. Field had acquired any newspaper ambition the department of justice, as you may recall, asked Mrs. Patterson of the Washington Times-Herald to send out and get other nonmembers to join with her in asking the department of justice to prosecute the Associated Press for violation of the anti-trust law. She told you that at a meeting here some four years ago. This she refused to do.

"When Mr. Field decided he was to start a newspaper in Chicago he did not file an application for membership. He at no time asked the Chicago members to waive their protest rights. He came to the executive committee of the board of directors with a lawyer and demanded immediate service, which I consider an indication that he had been coached by the department of justice.

Asked for Proxies

"When he finally was induced to file an application for membership he still did not ask for waiver of notice but asked for proxies. By that time I was determined to resist what I considered coercion, and so I set out and solicited proxies. I was visited by FBI agents and threatened at a meeting probably such as the FBI-Gestapo never had before. I had two stenographers and other witnesses to all that transpired. The FBI threatened other members.

"Later Mr. Thurman Arnold called upon me at my office and propounded the first of the many theories which have been induced to declare the Associated Press in violation of the anti-trust law. That was in March, 1942. In April, 1942, he attended the directors' meeting and told the directors that if they would elect the applicants he would bring a civil suit to establish the question of violation of the anti-trust law; if they failed to elect the applicants he would prosecute the entire board of directors criminally.

"I think it is a high point in the history of the Associated Press that your board of directors unanimously refused to be coerced.

"Now, if the prosecution had taken a criminal aspect, it would have gone before a jury and I have never had any doubt about what the verdict of the jury would have been. But a way was found around it and the justice department certified that the public necessity required an expeditious hearing before a statutory court to dispose of the matter quickly.

Trial Is Expeditious

"That certificate was filed on Aug. 28, 1942. But not until July 8, 1943, was the trial of this expeditious case held.

"I will say this for the trial—the trial certainly was expeditious. Only four hours were granted to decide one of the most momentous questions of constitutional law that has ever been presented in this country.

"When it came to the trial the theory which Mr. Truman Arnold had been presenting was brushed aside and a new theory presented in the court. That, as I said, was July 8, 1943. The expeditious opinion was handed down on Oct. 6, declaring the Associated Press in violation of the anti-trust law, as the court said, by judicial legislation, but on an entirely different and new theory of law not advanced by either of the attorneys general of whom I have been speaking.

Appeal Taken by AP

"Appeal was taken by the Associated Press on March 9, 1943. The appeal was heard on Dec. 5 and 6, 1944, and decision handed down June 18, 1945, almost three years to the day after the justice department had certified that an expeditious disposal of the case was necessary in the national interest.

"The five majority opinions gave five different reasons for upholding the decision of the lower court and all five opinions gave five different reasons from the opinion of the lower court. Counsel is as much mystified as the world as to what the law in the newspaper case may be. But they all agree that the court will hold us in contempt if we don't elect the applicants. Therefore, I second the motion."

MRS. JOHN KELLY

New York, Nov. 28—(AP)—A 7 pound 5 ounce daughter was born last night to Mrs. John Sims [Shipwreck] Kelly, the former Brenda Frazier, at Doctor's hospital.

Hospital officials said the condition of Mrs. Kelly and the child was satisfactory after a caesarian operation.

Mrs. Kelly inherited $1,400,000 in cash and a life interest in $2,500,000 under the will of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Clara Duff Frazier, in 1942, when she was 21. She and Kelly were married in June, 1941, in St. Patrick's cathedral.

BRITAIN'S PROSPECTS OF GETTING U.S. LOAN BELIEVED BRIGHTER

LONDON, Nov. 28 [Reuters]—The British-American financial discussions at Washington, D. C., were regarded in informed quarters here tonight as having taken a more favorable turn. The view persisted that matters at issue over the proposed 4 to 5 billion dollar loan should be settled within a few days.

Sources in close touch with events at Washington believed that in the last 24 hours America had come a distance toward Britain in trying to surmount the difficulties of the so-called waiver clause, altho it was not suggested that this had been disposed of.

The waiver clause is the instrument which, in the event of a bad financial year, would enable Britain to cancel interest and suspend capital payment on the loan.

SENT TO PRISON FOR LETTING PAL ANSWER DRAFT

George J. Krstovich, 19, of 1133 Altgeld st., who permitted an eager friend to be inducted into the army under his name Oct. 24, was sentenced to three years in the federal penitentiary yesterday by Federal Judge Elwyn R. Shaw for evading the draft. Fred Peebles, 17, of 922 Fullerton pkwy. offered to enter the army in Krstovich's place. With Krstovich's classification card and order for induction, Peebles reported at the induction center and was ordered to Fort Sheridan, where he lost his nerve and disclosed the scheme. Krstovich was arrested, but Peebles stayed in the army, under his own name.

FORD ASKS CIO PAY $5 FOR EACH OUTLAW STRIKER

Seeks Daily Collections During Job Stoppages

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 28 (AP)—The Ford Motor company today proposed that the CIO United Auto Workers reimburse the firm $5 a day for each union man taking part in future unauthorized work stoppages at Ford plants.

The surprise move overshadowed other developments on the automotive front today, including the first Washington meeting between government officials and union representatives of 225,000 idle General Motors workers.

Labor Secretary Schwellenbach took part in the Washington conference at which the government agreed to ask General Motors to resume negotiations with the UAW looking toward an end of the G. M. strike that began Nov. 21.

Calls It Unrealistic

The Ford proposal evoked widespread interest in the automotive industry and drew from Richard T. Leonard, director of the UAW's Ford division, the comment, "Such a proposal is unrealistic and would not guarantee an end to unauthorized strikes."

The company suggested that it be empowered by the UAW to collect the penalties from "any amount collected by the company for the union under the checkoff provisions" of its contract with the union.

A Ford spokesman said, "The company's position is that the union can control its membership in the matter of unauthorized stoppages, slowdowns, and controled production but has failed to do so during the life of the present contract."

Takes the Spotlight

The Ford development temporarily took the spotlight from the General Motors strike, which has hit G. M. plants in 51 cities thruout the nation.

Few observers believed the Washington conference between union heads and Edgar L. Warren, chief labor department conciliator, would bring any formula for a quick end to the battle between corporation and union.

The session had been officially described in advance as "informal," and there were no General Motors representatives in Washington.

A spokesman for General Motors corporation said tonight that the firm's national advertising program for the first quarter of 1946 has been withdrawn because of the strike situatoin. He explained that it was "impossible to do anything about the advertisments already scheduled for the last quarter of the current year."

As strikers continued picketing the corporation's inactive factories, the state of Michigan took official cognizance of the problem of unemployment compensation involving World War II. veterans employed by General Motors.

Plan Three Test Cases

Michigan's state office of veterans affairs, established to assist the returned soldier, announced that three "test cases" of strike idle veterans would be presented the veterans' administration in Washington for adjudication under the GI bill of rights.

No figure on the number of veterans employed by General Motors and made idle in the strike has been announced, but the total is believed to run into many thousands.

Michigan law, similar to that in many other states, holds a person ineligible for unemployment compensation if he has a direct interest in a strike.

Offices of the Michigan unemployment compensation commission were picketed today by 20 veterans protesting a ruling denying them compensation. Signs saying "What is the GI bill of rgihts" and "We fought for it, let's have it" were carried by the group.

AVERY PROTESTS WARD PICKETING BY AUTO UNION

BY GEORGE HARTMANN

The strike demonstration at Montgomery Ward & Co. properties by the United Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Employes union [CIO] spread to additional company units in other cities yesterday.

Sewell L. Avery, Ward's board chairman, yesterday protested to Gov. Ralph F. Gates of Indiana the forced closing of the company's retail store at Anderson, Ind., by pickets of the CIO auto workers union, which, with other CIO unions, is aiding the URWDSE in picketing Ward plants.

Cites Failure of Police

"The auto workers union has, in violation of law, blocked the entrance to the store and forcibly prevented Ward's employes from going to work," Avery telegraphed to Gov. Gates. . . . "Ward has called upon the chief of police of Anderson and the sheriff of Madison county to protect Ward's employes who wish . . . to come to work. Both the chief of police and the sheriff have failed to stop this flagrant violation of law. . . ."

After receiving the appeal, Gov. Gates said he would send Charles W. Kern, Indiana labor commissioner, to determine whether "life or property was endangered" at the store by the auto workers' picketing. He said he would "undoubtedly reply to Avery" after Kern had made his investigation.

Asserts Employes Join Union

Irving Abramson, national organization director of the URWDSE, admitted the auto workers had closed the Anderson store. He said the store's 40 employes immediately had joined his union, which would petition for a national labor relations board vote to obtain the bargaining rights at the store.

Other retail stores Abramson said were closed yesterday by other CIO unions aiding in the strike were in Johnstown, Altoona, Punxsutawney, New Kensington, and McKeesport, all in Pennsylvania, and one in Saginaw, Mich.

As proof of its assertions that the strike has had little effect on Ward's business, the company last night made known a survey of the number of employes at work Tuesday in its Chicago units.

70 Pct. Reported at Work

The accounting firm of Arthur Anderson & Co., 120 S. La Salle st., hired to make the survey, revealed yesterday that more than 70 per cent of all full time employes were at work Tuesday in the mail order house, the retail store, and the administration building.

Says U. S. Has Long Way to Go to Be Wise as British

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

DIVORCE DENIED MINORS, DECISION GIVEN MOTHERS

Baby Custody to One, Other Pays Support

To an uninitiated spectator the events which occurred before Judge Elmer J. Schnackenberg in Circuit court yesterday in the divorce action of Hemmerle vs. Hemmerle would have been confusing, even tho everything came out even in the end.

It all started when Mrs. Kathryn Hemmerle, 17, of 4656 Kasson av., filed suit for divorce against William, 19, a discharged soldier.

Because both are minors the court decided they weren't entitled to sue for divorce, altho they are parents of a 10 month old daughter, and ruled that Mrs. Hemmerle's mother, Mrs. Kathryn Sorensen of the Kasson av. address, would have to file the suit.

Mrs. Sorensen informed the court that she was happily married and didn't want a divorce.

Didn't Want Divorce

Mrs. Hemmerle's attorneys, Joseph H. and Norman Becker, explained to Mrs. Sorensen that she wouldn't be getting a divorce for herself. She would be getting it for her daughter, who couldn't get it because she was too young.

Her daughter, the attorneys said, would have to withdraw her suit for divorce.

Mrs. Sorensen sighed. The whole thing sounded too complicated, but she indicated she would ride along on the theory that the lawyers knew what they were doing.

At this juncture Judge Schnackenberg observed gloomily:

"I wish the Supreme court would rule on whether or not marriage emancipates an individual.

Decision to Mothers

"Lacking such a decision, I can only treat these litigants as minors who are powerless to form contracts even tho they did get married, who can't bring court actions, and who can't do much of anything except mind their mothers."

Custody of the baby, Patricia, was awarded to Mrs. Sorensen, an arrangement which met with approval all around, and Hemmerle said he would pay $10 a week for Patricia's support.

"You're a minor," Judge Schnackenberg reminded him. "As far as this court is concerned you can't pay anything. Your mother [Mrs. Jean Hemmerle of 4825 N. Oakley blvd.] will have to pay."

Mrs. Hemmerle Sr. agreed and Judge Schnackenberg granted the divorce.

REDS TURN DOWN U. S. OFFER TO REPLACE SECOND RAIL TRACKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Nov. 28—Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov has rejected an American offer to relay a second track on the Helmstedt-Magdeburg-Berlin railway, making the line a double track and capable of handling considerable additional trains for passengers and supplies to Berlin. The Red army tore up one track on both the Hannover-Berlin and the Magdeburg-Berlin main lines, sending the rails to Russia. Owing to difficulties in operating trains to Berlin over a single track, the United States offered to rip up a secondary line in the American zone and double track the main line artery again, but the Reds refused.

RED DOMINATION OF 3 KEY UNIONS IN N.Y. BARED

Points to Party Scheme for Vital Industries

BY CHARLES GOTTHART
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Nov. 28 — Communist domination of union labor strategy in three key New York City industries was thrown into sharp focus today by developments affecting shipping and communications. In these industries and the third—transportation — Communists have come closer to achieving their goal of dictatorship in the New York City area than elsewhere in America, according to authorities who have studied the trend.

The three industries are vital to the national welfare in time of emergency, and their control thru unions affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations has been one of the principal points of world communist strategy.

The strategy, according to those who have watched it unfold, has been to control the unions from the top, so that any protests by non-Communists from the rank and file membership are made ineffectual.

Bridges' Move Cited

Today's development that emphasized the coördination of communist dominated unions was Harry Bridges' implied threat to call a strike of west coast stevedores to support Joseph Curran's National Maritime union work stoppage on the east coast called for Monday.

The American Communications association called a three hour membership meeting of Western Union telegraph employes which had the effect of a strike in New York last night.

Communist strategy in the transportation industry is exercised thru Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers' union and a city councilman. Altho Quill has not appeared in the news since his recent reëlection, his union follows every twist of the Communist party line.

All of these unions are CIO units, and, altho most of their leaders stoutly deny Communist party membership, their adherence to communist strategy serves the party cause just as well. These unions include subway, taxicab and bus employes, telegraph workers, and sailors operating out of east coast ports.

Saved from Deportation

Bridges, now coming to the support of Curran, was saved from deportation as a Communist and undesirable alien. Curran has threatened a national maritime union strike in supposed indignation over the government's failure to utilize all available ships in returning American troops from overseas.

In his current indignation Curran fails to mention the part played by Communists in the recent New York dock strike which disrupted troop schedules, nor that his union members booed and hissed soldiers who unloaded ships when the stevedores quit.

Bridges was allied with Curran in that struggle also, the two uniting in an attempt to unseat Joseph P. Ryan, long time Communist foe and president of the AFL Stevedores union, whose strike the Communists prolonged.

The communist influence also is exercised in other directions. Radio messages at sea are handled by wireless operators belonging to the American Communications association, whose leaders the navy barred from merchant ships early in the war because of their record in fighting conscription and in following other party line policies then in operation.

Anti-Red Ousted

Most radio production in the New York area is handled by members of the CIO United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers, in which the communist influence is so strong that an anti-Communist president was ousted several years ago.

The CIO United Office and Professional Workers is so strongly communist that several organizations have refused to deal with the union.

Another union with a communist tinge is the CIO Teachers union, whose former spokesman, Bella V. Dodd, is now on the party's national board.

Keystone of the Communists' union power in this area is the CIO Greater New York Industrial Union council, headed by Quill and Curran, which beats the drum religiously for every new communist practice.

CALL 24-HOUR WORK STOPPAGE OF 90,000 MARITIME WORKERS

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Joseph Curran, president of the CIO National Maritime union, announced at a news conference today that approximately 90,000 men would be involved in a 24 hour work stoppage starting at 8 a. m. Monday, in protest against what he called delays in bringing service men home from overseas.

Curran said the unions and memberships affected would be the NMU, 35,000; CIO International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union, 25,000; Marine Firemen, Oilers, and Water Tenders [Ind.], 6,000; CIO American Communications association, 4,000; CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards association, 6,000; CIO Inland Boatmen's union, 2,000; AFL Master Mates and Pilots association, 6,000, and CIO Marine Engineers, 6,000.

Earlier, Harry Bridges, head of the longshoremen's union, said in a telegram to the war shipping administration that members of his union on the west coast would cease loading on Dec. 1 ships diverted from troop carrying to commercial purposes.

Curran said all vessels except "legitimate troops carriers and relief ships" would be affected by the stoppage.

TEAMSTERS SET PLANS TO REGAIN DAILY DELIVERY

On the orders of Daniel J. Tobin, their international president, teamsters' unions thruout the country are going to insist that pre-war daily deliveries by stores again be put into effect, Henry G. Burger, organizer of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers, said yesterday.

His charge that the stores don't want to return to the daily delivery system was denied by Fred Goerlitz, managing director of the Chicago Retail Merchants' association.

"Let Burger show us where we can get the equipment—new trucks or tires—and the stores will immediately go back to regular deliveries to customers," Goerlitz said. "Stores are anxious to give real delivery service again and they will as soon as they can get the equipment to do it with."

Henry J. Lorenz of 4048 Chicago av. told police yesterday that burglars took a .38 caliber revolver from his home.

RULES LEADERS ARE LIABLE FOR UNION DAMAGES

Union officials may be sued as individuals for damages resulting from their union activities, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals held yesterday in ordering trial of the million dollar libel suit brought by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company against seven officials of local 2928 of the United Steel Workers of America [CIO].

The decision, written by Judge Otto Kerner and concurred in by Judge J. Earl Major, sustained dismissal of the union as a defendant, thereby reversing one part and sustaining another part of a decision, given a year ago by Judge Michael L. Igoe in United States District court, which dismissed both union and individuals.

Judge Will M. Sparks in a dissenting opinion held that both union and individuals should be retained as defendants.

Nine Defendants

Defendants and their positions when the suit was filed are Joseph Germano, district director of the United Steel Workers; George Mischeau, international representative; Peter J. Clarke, local president; Isaac Lovett, vice president; George Fassbender, treasurer; Jack Barton, publicity director, and John Morrissey, assistant publicity director. Two nonunion defendants are Ken D. Norton and his wife, Nancy, who operate a printing service in Hammond, Ind.

The suit charged that the libel occurred in the union's paper, The Keel, in its issue of Feb. 25, 1944. The Keel, printed by the Nortons for the union, challenged a series of ads which the company published nationally showing revenue and costs. The union article accused the company of falsifying to the public and workers in the name of patriotism.

Charge Constitutes Libel

"The charge that plaintiff falsified to the public and to its workers facts concerning its earnings constitutes libel per se," the majority opinion stated.

"We have had numerous cases in this court under this act [national labor relations act]," Judge Sparks' dissenting opinion read, "where various citizens of Illinois have been compelled by court order, much to their sorrow, to deal with a labor union in the manner contemplated by the act. We know of none who has not regarded such union as a legal entity in a very real sense."

WAR VET TAXI DRIVER LACKING LICENSE IS FINED

Robert Johnson, 38, of 5330 Michigan av., the first of 33 Negro war veterans who face arraignment on 1,700 charges of driving taxicabs without licenses, was fined $5 and costs yesterday in S. State st. court. The defendants have been denied licenses to operate cabs on the ground that the city has issued its quota of 3,000 licenses. Charges against all the defendants except Johnson were continued to Dec. 5 on an agreement by their attorney, Richard Westbrooks, that each will be fined $5. Westbrooks said he is planning an appeal.

ARMY REVEALS HOW IT BLINDED ENEMY'S RADAR

"Window" also can be shot in shells from ships or vehicles. It can be made to simulate a big fleet of ships on an enemy radar screen.

The electronic jamming devices attacked enemy radar receivers with radio waves, which drowned out returning radar echoes and obliterated all indications of the target from the radar screen. This principle is familiar to radio listeners who have received broadcasts from two stations on the same wave length. Electronic jammers were designated by the code names of "carpet" and "rug."

Methods Demonstrated

These two methods of combatting enemy radar were demonstrated at the Bedford army air base near Cambridge, which was used for experiments in counter-radar measures during the war. Newspaper correspondents and army and navy observers watched the screens of radar ground installations as they picked up planes approaching the field and gave their distance and direction.

A few miles away, six bombers dropped glittering clouds of foil strips and ribbon. Immediately the picture on the radar screen was obscured, and what had been individual spots of light indicating the position of the planes melted into a meaningless blur. It was no longer possible to determine where the planes were or where they were moving.

The effect of electronic jamming was even more striking. When the planes "attacking" the air field sent out their waves of static the ground radar screens were obliterated completely by wavering lines and flashes of light.

First Used in 1940

Those watching the demonstration were reminded that the jamming was being done by only six planes and were asked to imagine the effect if a thousand planes were dropping foil and sending out counter radar waves. Mass jamming on such a vast scale by the allies was commonplace during the war.

Both the British and the Germans experimented successfully with counter radar devices as early as 1940, but each refrained from jamming operations in combat for fear the other would copy them.

The radio research laboratory was set up at Harvard university by the office of scientific research and development in 1942 when it became apparent that German and Japanese radar would become troublesome and effective counter measures would be needed. The laboratory turned out counter devices ranging from the foil strips to a giant 125 ton land based jammer with a 150 foot antenna.

Radar counter measures were outstandingly successful in the invasions of Sicily, Italy, southern France, Leyte, Iwo Jima, and Okinawa, knocking out enemy radar and blinding the defenders. The most spectacular operation, however, was on D-day, when a vast anti-radar blitz blacked out the entire German radar system along the coast of northern France.

BABY SNATCHED FROM CARRIAGE; SOUGHT IN EAST

Chelsea, Mass., Nov. 28 (AP)—A 6 months old baby was snatched from his carriage early tonight a short time after his mother placed him within 50 yards of her home.

The baby is the son of Mrs. Rose Carlan, 23, and Mach. Mate 1st Class James J. Carlan, serving with the navy in Oakland, Cal.

Police said the entire night force and all available inspectors, in addition to hundreds of neighbors, were rallied in the hunt for the missing child.

Barbara Dioptt, 7, a neighbor, told police she saw an elderly woman, dressed in a black coat and hat, dash off with the baby, Ronald Jr.

JEWISH LEADER ASSAILS BEVIN ON PALESTINE

Hits Policy Speech as Tricky

160 Under Arrest

JERUSALEM, Nov. 28 (AP)—British military headquarters said today that 160 Jews were being held for trial on charges of obstruction as the result of recent disturbances along the Palestine coast north of Tel Aviv. "These Jews were traveling in trucks and buses and were returning from the area of Givat Haim, whither they had gone with the apparent intention of offering organized obstruction to police," a British bulletin said.

JERUSALEM, Nov. 28 [Reuters]—In what is regarded here as an authoritative reply to Ernest Bevin's recent speech in the house of commons on the Palestine problem, David Ben-Gurion, chairman of the Jewish agency executive committee in Palestine, today criticized the British foreign secretary's statement on the following five main counts:

1. "There is no mention of the Labor party's pronounced policy for Palestine."

2. "It does not mention anywhere the Jewish people, but instead it employs all sorts of terms like Jewish community or Jews."

3. "The concept of the Jewish national home has disappeared. Bevin speaks only of a Jewish home."

Cites Jews Creative Work

4. "Bevin stated that since the mandate was granted the whole history of Palestine is a history of conflicts between the Jews and Arabs. Did not Bevin hear about the great enterprise of building up and creation accomplished by the Jewish people in the period between the two world wars, of which there is no precedent in the world—work achieved by immigrants with and without authority—and which changed the entire appearance of the country?"

5. "What is also missing from Bevin's statement is the problem of the homelessness of the Jewish people."

Calls Statement Cunning

Speaking at an extraordinary session of the Jewish elected assembly here, Ben-Gurion declared "it must be admitted that Bevin's statement was composed with skill and cunning. It is replete with hints and ambiguities, and there is no doubt that it was framed in such a way as to enable the foreign office heads to argue before the Labor party that the document gives the Jews and Arabs full satisfaction."

Amplifying his second point Ben-Gurion said that the league of nations' mandate "gives official recognition to the Jewish people which is the actual basis for the existence of the mandate" under which Britain administers Palestine.

Reds O. K. Czech Pact on Carpatho-Ukraine

MOSCOW, Russia, Nov. 28 (AP)—The presidium of the supreme soviet has ratified an agreement, signed last June 29 between the U. S. S. R. and Czechoslovakia, covering the Carpatho-Ukraine, which has been transferred to the Ukraine as part of the soviet union.

BRITISH WOMEN WARN OF FOOD RIOTS UNLESS SITUATION IS EASED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 28—The "queue busters," a deputation of three women and four men, called on S. J. Hood, the food ministry's director of rationing, today and warned him that unless something was done soon to ease the food and shopping situation women of Britain would riot.

Mrs. Irene Lovelock, head of the British Housewives' League, submitted a six point program which demanded: More shops be opened; rationing of fruit and vegetables; increased supplies of fish and a speed-up in the granting of licenses for new fish shops; stricter control over hotels and cafes; better distribution of food with increased rations for adolescents, and that housewives be allowed to choose their own milk supplier.

Mrs. S. Luffingham, who claimed that her son contracted tuberculosis thru under-nourishment, warned Hood that the "strain and trials of life are reflecting themselves on men, women, and children." The ministry spokesman replied that Britain had had her fair share of food and gave little hope for any speedy increase in supplies.

BRITISH MAJOR AND EMILY HAHN MARRIED IN EAST

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 28 (AP)—Author Emily Hahn and Maj. Charles Boxer, British officer whom she named in her autobiography as the father of her child, were married here late today.

Justice of the Peace Irving Sweedler performed the ceremony in the city hall office of Andrew Casolino, registrar of vital statistics, who had issued the couple their license.

Probate Judge Clifford Sturges granted a waiver of the blood test and five day waiting period required by Connecticut law.

Judge Sturges said the couple already had had a blood test in New York, where they were refused a wedding license yesterday, and that he had no hesitancy in waiving the Connecticut requirements.

Maj. Boxer said in New York yesterday that he had confirmed that his divorce from Ursula Tulloh became absolute last July, but New York authorities refused to grant him a marriage license because New York law forbids the remarriage of persons divorced on grounds of adultery until three years after divorce.

GAY AND MERRY GI CHRISTMAS NOW IS ASSURED

BY HARRY McCLAIN

Christmas for thousands of wounded and sick service men and women will be a happier time this year because of the generosity of readers of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

This year, as in the last two years, Tribune readers are going to send thousands of gifts to soldiers, sailors, and marines in general hospitals in 10 midwestern and central states.

Names of the patients will be collected next week by the Friend of the Yanks and mailed at once to readers who have requested them. Everything possible has been done by the army and navy to restore the health of the wounded and sick and to discharge all who are able to resume their places in civilian life, but thousands still face many months of hospitalization before they are recovered.

Unexpected Gifts Prized.

Many of the patients will, of course, receive gifts from relatives and friends, but, according to hospital officers, these gifts do not begin to have the morale stimulant of a gift from an unknown and unexpected source. Gifts from Tribune readers, officers say, assure the wounded and sick fighting men that they have not been forgotten.

Thus far readers in 30 states from coast to coast have requested the names of service men to whom they will send gifts. Hundreds of readers have written to the Friend of the Yanks and expressed gratitude for the opportunity to share their Christmas joy with a fighting man who suffered injury or illness when fighting to insure happy Christmases for the future.

Tribune readers who have not already requested the name of a fighting man so they can make his Christmas a bit more cheerful still may do so. To obtain the name of a hospitalized fighter it is necessary only to clip the coupon in an adjoining column and mail to the Friend of the Yanks with a stamped, addressed envelope.

Because the fighters' names will be collected from the hospitals in the first few days of next week and mailed to readers as soon as received it will not be possible to fill requests for names that do not reach the Friend of the Yanks before mailing time.

2 NAZI FLAGS SOLD TO LONDON BIDDER FOR PRO-HITLER LEGION

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP)—Two nazi flags, bought at auction at the former German embassy in London, were apparently en route tonight to Kingdom house, headquarters of the Legion of Christian Reformers, a new organization which London newspapers said regards Hitler as "a divine instrument."

The flags were removed by A. Wilson, who said he intended to present them to the Christian Reformers, which received wide publicity in British papers yesterday in connection with the auction of a huge granite bust of Hitler.

The bust was bought by Capt. R. Gordon-Canning, former member of the British Union of Fascists, for $2,000 after spirited bidding. Gordon-Canning, who was imprisoned for two years during the war under defense regulations, told reporters the bust might "go back to Germany in about 25 years' time." Receipts from the sale, scheduled to last three more days, now total $202,000.

DUTCH RULE IN JAVA EBBS AS HATRED RISES

See Indonesians Holding Whip Hand

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

SOERABAJA, Java, Nov. 28—Each day of the fighting in Java makes it increasingly clear that the Dutch or other non-Indonese can in the future live in Java peacefully—and profitably—only with the permission of the Indonesians.

So intense and universal is the Indonesians' hatred of the Dutch that many neutrals are certain the Dutch will never be able to return to the islands. It is true that with sufficient troops the Dutch could occupy the main cities, but thru guerrilla warfare the Indonesians could force the Dutch to live virtually in stockades.

And because the wealth of Indonesia lies in the plantations, oil fields, and mines rather than in the cities, the Dutch would find that such occupation would be unprofitable.

Hate America, Too

The Indonesians are daily spreading their hatred of the Dutch to include also British and Americans. The British efforts to disarm the Indonesians have brought about a popular feeling that the British are in Java mainly to clear the way for the Dutch. Hatred for the Americans springs from the fact that the Dutch are wearing American uniforms, carrying American arms, and driving American jeeps and flying American planes, and also from the continued silence from Washington, D. C.

The Javanese had looked to America to make good on the Atlantic charter's promise of freedom from aggression.

With proper husbanding of their large stores of arms and munitions the Indonesians could wage a deadly guerrilla war for years. Whether the Dutch could raise sufficient troops to combat such warfare is questionable. Hubertus Van Mook, lieutenant governor, says the Dutch will provide "whatever troops are necessary." The British now have two divisions [about 40,000 men] in Java and cannot even keep peace in the six cities they occupy—Soerabaja, Batavia, Bandoeng, Semarang, Ambarawa, and Megalang. Some military men believe that 100,000 troops would be the absolute minimum for attempting to beat down the Indonesian independence movement.

Series of Blunders

Virtually every step that the Dutch and British have taken has only added to the troubles. The British, who say they came here to disarm the Japs and evacuate prisoners and internees, are now so deeply committed that nobody knows how or when they can withdraw.

When the first British and Dutch arrived the chances for peaceful negotiations with the Indonesians seemed good. But the Dutch refused to talk. Some neutrals want the united nations to intervene with a plan for a trusteeship which would eventually bring independence for Indonesia, but every day the chances for even such a scheme to succeed grow dimmer.

The Dutch still claim that the whole independence movement is Jap inspired. The Indonesians keep pointing out that the history of Dutch rule has been full of uprisings—the Indonesians list 22 revolts during 300 years.

List Crimes Against Dutch

The Indonesians charge the Dutch with the following "crimes":

1.—Lack of education. Before the war Indonesia had two school systems, Dutch and native. Only the Dutch and the sons of civil servants earning 100 guilders [about $54] per month could attend the Dutch schools, paying 10 guilders per month. The number of Indonesians attending the Dutch high schools and colleges was less than 100 in 1930. The native schools ran either two or three years and the tuition was three guilders a month—the average Javanese family lived on 10 guilders a month. As a result, in 1930, only 6½ per cent of the males were literate and only one-half of one per cent of the females.

2.—Land seizures. Under land proprietorships dating back to the earliest colonial days, two-thirds of all the agricultural exports — rubber, coffee, tea, quinine, tapioca, and spices—came from Dutch plantations. The natives had barely enough land to grow their own rice and vegetables.

Natives Pay Most Taxes

3.—Political domination. Before the war the Dutch set up an excuse for a legislature but it was so loaded that the Dutch maintained control. The islands had two classes of citizens—Dutch and non-Dutch, with separate laws for each. Taxes began at the 10 guilder a month level, making the natives carry the big share.

The number of political prisoners ran into the thousands. Eighteen hundred were in one New Guinea camp alone. The Indonesians claim 60,000 were arrested after the revolt in west Java in 1926. The Dutch say that revolt was Communist inspired.

Economically, Indonesia was run by the Dutch for the Dutch. Foreign business could operate in Indonesia only with Dutch permission. As a result the only American firms doing a sizable business were General Motors, General Electric, National Carbon, Goodyear Tire and Rubber, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, Standard Oil, Procter & Gamble, Singer Sewing Machine, and eight motion picture distribution agencies.

Inter-island shipping was reserved for the Dutch. Banking, tin, salt, and even pawnbroking were Dutch monopolies. Quinine was a virtual Dutch monopoly. Time and again American oil companies were given permission to explore Dutch territory, but they were refused permission to exploit their discoveries and their findings were turned over to Dutch Royal Shell.

BRITISH OCCUPY ALL SOERABAJA, JAVA NAVY BASE

BATAVIA, Java, Nov. 29 [Thursday]—(AP)—The British command officially announced today the complete occupation of the Java naval base city of Soerabaja—the scene of bitter fighting in recent weeks between Indonesian Nationalists and British Indian troops—and said a local administration had been set up there under British control.

Military operations continued south of Soerabaja, where 12 Indonesian guns were knocked out yesterday.

At Bandoeng, the summer capital 75 miles southeast of Batavia, the commander of the British 37th brigade continued negotiations with Soetardjo, the Indonesian "governor" of West Java. British authorities earlier had issued an ultimatum that any Indonesian found in the northern half of Bandoeng after noon today would be shot.

The Britsih said other terms of their ultimatum provided that no Indonesian civilians be permitted within 220 yards of any British or Japanese post and that any male civilians manning road blocks would be shot.

A British bulletin said Soetardjo apparently was trying "very hard" to coöperate but added that his efforts were ineffectual since he had no control over some native Nationalist elements.

BANDITS HOLD UP LOOP HANDBOOK; GET THOUSANDS

Patrons of a handbook on the second floor of the robbery was made to the police by David Russell, who is reputed to be the owner. Capt. Thomas J. Duffy of the Central station, hearing that a crime had been committed in his territory, assigned Detective Edward Kirby to interview Russell.

Customers Recall 4 Robbers

"I don't know why you put the heat on me," Russell told the detective. "I was never robbed."

His denial was not supported by his customers, who said they recalled vividly that four robbers carrying sawed-off shotguns or machine guns invaded the place. The bandits herded everybody into a side room, forced all to take off their pants, and took all the money they could find in the pants pockets.

Work Like Professionals

Most of the witnesses agreed the robbers were more than 40 years old, and not novices. Police recalled that in the past, gambling syndicate operators have taken their own methods to get revenge for holdups.

In August, 1944, a David Russell was arrested in a raid on a room at 192 N. Clark st., where four telephones and racing forms were confiscated. The Russell arrested at that time said he used the room for his work as a bookkeeper for a restaurant.

Last Aug. 3, a David Russell told police he was robbed of a $2,500 diamond ring and $150 by two gunmen at Clark st. and Wacker dr. He gave his address as 2714 Simpson st., Evanston.

11 COMPLAINANTS ABSENT IN AUTO CASES GET FINES

Judge Charles S. Dougherty in Safety court yesterday ordered court cost assessments of $15 each against 11 complainants, including the Yellow Cab company, because they failed to appear to prosecute charges in reckless driving cases. He said he is determined to put a stop to a growing practice of motorists using his court "as a collection agency" to get money from drivers involved in accidents.

POLISH CHICAGO DRAMATIZED IN W-G-N PROGRAM

Production Tells Story of Sturdy People

BY RITA FITZPATRICK

The largest Polish city in the world is not Warsaw or Wilno, not Poznan, or Krakow. It is Chicago!

The story of how this city in the heart of a new continent, rugged and rough, far from the graceful church spires and the aged culture of an old land became the refuge and the home of the Polish people was told at 9 p. m. last night in a thrilling drama over W-G-N. It was the fifth in the series of broadcasts of "The Chicago Story," a dramatic production depicting the outstanding educational, recreational, industrial, artistic, and human features of our town.

More than 200 representatives of Polish organizations, schools, and churches were special guests at the broadcast. It was their story. The drama highlighted what Chicago has given to its people of Polish origin; showed they have given as much in culture, labor, and progress to it.

650,000 of Polish Descent

It was the story, too, of 650,000 residents of Polish descent here, but principally the saga of an area bounded by Grand and Western avs., Armitage av. and the Chicago river, a city within a city, of 100,000 residents...a city of Americans, but block after block of Polish names, Polish faces, and the Polish tongue. Here are new lime and stone and old red brick; here are modern facades and ancient wooden houses.

As the drama told, it was a sturdy pioneer, Anthony Smarzewski-Schermann, 32, of Posen, who in 1859 first settled in the swamp that was to become Chicago's little Poland. It was neither city nor village nor farm land. The city was settled. The farms were mostly taken up. He took what was left and made what he could.

People Strong in Purpose

But he was of those people who had wrested a franchise from the Virginia colony in 1619. Before him in America had come Dr. Alexander Curcyusz, who founded the first institution of higher learning in 1659 in what is now New York, and those two great Revolutionary patriots, Thaddeus Kosciusko, the father of American artillery, and Casimir Pulaski, the second chief of cavalry killed at Savannah, Ga., in 1779. Anthony and his people who followed also were strong in purpose.

And so a swamp was solidified and became a city of distinctive stores and homes, schools, and churches. Now a closely knit national, religious and linguistic community, Polish Chicago has many parochial schools, four high schools, a college, an orphanage, and a home for the aged. It publishes four main Polish newspapers and has large, progressive organizations, including the largest chapter of the Polish National alliance.

Story Deftly Told

All this was dramatized in a defly woven story by a large profesisonal cast, augmented by the guest appearance of the Rev. Edward Golnick of St. Hyacinth church. The orchestra was conducted by Robert Trendler and the show produced by Jack La Frandre. The script was written by Fran Coughlin and Thomas Dalhasen.

Judge Michael L. McKinley, who retires this week as chief justice of the Superior court, was honored yesterday at a luncheon in Hotel Sherman given by the nine Superior court judges who served with him as members of the executive committee during the last three years, and by the five presidents of the Chicago Bar association who presided during the same period.

A scroll was presented to Judge McKinley, which read in part:

"By your unselfish manner and untiring effort in the discharge of the duties of chief justice you have gained the respect and admiration of the bench and bar. Courteous, kindly, and gracious, and with a dignity commensurate with the duties of your office, you have given in full measure to your fellow judges, the bar, and to the public, the highest type of service."

Guests at Luncheon

Judges attending the luncheon were John F. Bolton, who succeeds Judge McKinley as chief justice; Ulysses S. Schwartz, John C. Lewe, Grover C. Niemeyer, Robert E. Crowe, John P. McGoorty, Frank M. Padden, John J. Lupe, and Joseph A. Graber.

The bar association presidents were Harry N. Gottlieb, Lloyd D. Heth, Floyd E. Thompson, Stephen E. Hurley, and J. Francis Dammann.

Judge McKinley's record as a public servant reaches back to the turn of the century, when he served as secretary of the convention which revised the charter for the city of Chicago.

In Civil Service Post

His next public post was with the civil service commission in Chicago, to which he devoted four years. A similar period was spent as a member of the state legislature. He has been a Superior court judge since 1911, serving three terms as chief justice of the Criminal court and six years as chief justice of the Superior court.

Judge McKinley is a graduate of the University of Iowa, where he starred as a football player and was known as a fleet runner.

UNRRA Signs to Assume Bigger British Zone Load

HERFORD, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP)—Progressive assumption by UNRRA of responsibility for the care of displaced persons in the British occupied zone is provided under an agreement signed yesterday by Field Marshal, Montgomery and Gen. Sir F. E. Morgan, UNRRA chief of operations in Germany.

COLLINS FETED BY KINDLY FOLK WHO 'KEEP' HIM

One hundred ten contributors to THE TRIBUNE column, "A Line O' Type or Two," gathered last night in the Chicago Bar association rooms to pay tribute to the column conductor, Charles Collins, and cast a few cheery verbal barbs at one another.

Irving Bachrach, whose column name is Duke Bakrak, party manager, told the gathering that the entertainment guaranteed that no one present would go home with a grouch.

"What about Mrs. Bachrach?" a neighboring diner inquired.

"In previous years we have entertained ourselves," Bachrach continued, "and it was terrible. So this year we have professional entertainment."

The contributors who ranged, as some one pointed out, from 8 to 80 in years, presented a cross-section of professions and occupations at the dinner.

Incunabulus Bears a Gift

There was Comdr. Arthur A. Gilbert, U. S. N. R., one of the first dentists to enter the service, who just returned from the Pacific and who signs his contributions Incunabulus. He presented to Linemaster Collins a volume of the last four Line Books bound in leather which he had handtooled himself.

Also present was Hal W. Trovillion, publisher, Herrin, Ill.; John Hooks, who sonnets over the signature Quizzicus; Ruth Crary, poetess, who recently published the book of verse, "Forty Shillings," and Max Maier, Max of the Second Gallery.

Philip Maxwell, director of the Chicagoland Music Festival, as toastmaster, told the gathering that he had "been accepted on the fringe of music and hoped to be accepted on the fringe of literature."

Two Ton Baker Sings

Maxwell introduced Richard [Two Ton] Baker, pianist and songster of W-G-N, who was followed by Winifred Heckman, winner of the Chicagoland Music Festival as best contralto. The diners also were entertained by a comedy act in which Marie Zendt, Lola Fletcher, and Rose Du Moulin portrayed two sopranos, who dislike each other, and a pianist who, disgusted, deserts the piano for a bit of ballet dancing.

Linemaster Collins did not escape when Bachrach resumed the microphone to introduce some of the contributors present.

"And now," Bachrach announced, "I will introduce a number of the persons who compile Charles Collins' living"

NAME LEADERS TO AID WOUNDED IN 'LEST WE FORGET' GROUP

Dr. Melford E. Zinser, a loop dentist and a director of the Chicago Dental society, last night was elected chairman of the Lest We Forget committee, a group of prominent persons who plan events of recreation and relaxation for wounded men in army, navy, and marine hospitals.

The meeting, held in the Merchants and Manufacturers' club, also resulted in the election of Norman W. Harris, vice president of Harris, Hall & Co., as treasurer; Ernst Schmidt, president of the Lake Geneva Yacht club, as secretary, and Robert B. Emery, insurance broker, as chairman of the entertainment committee.

The committee is planning first night parties at sports and dramatic events.

JUSTICE TO COME FROM HOME RULE, DOUGLAS SAYS

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Douglas tonight said the advent of atomic energy required the surrender of some part of sovereignty by nations in a common defense against aggression.

"But," he added, "subject to the requirements of world government, self government of all peoples must be the goal. Justice for all people will come from home rule, not from some far away world capital. Freedom for all people is the only true guarantee that our new charters of world government will be effective."

Douglas, in an address prepared for delivery before a meeting known as "the peoples congress," stated he did not see how Americans "would be justified in saying to Russia, or China, or to any other country—conform your political and legal institutions to our pattern, or else. We must have great tolerance with the efforts of other nations to improve the lot of their citizens. They have problems peculiar to themselves."

STATE MEDICINE BALLOONS COSTS IN NEW ZEALAND

Hospitals Jammed with Permanent Patients

BY QUENTIN POPE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Nov. 27—In six years of operation New Zealand's system of state medical care has ballooned costs, jammed hospitals, promoted a physicians' racket of large dimensions, and speeded the development of a nation of nostrum takers. The system has not cut sickness and has not provided adequate medical service.

What happened when New Zealand, a nation of 1,570,000 population, went over to free medical care is shown by figures covering admittances to the national hospital system. In 1932 admissions were 79,000; in 1944, 171,000.

Despite a major war time increase of hospital beds, the New Zealander who needs hospital attention finds it harder to get. Administrative chiefs say hospitals are jammed with the aged and chronically ill, senile, and other long term patients. Ordinarily they would have received care at home, but today are dispatched to hospitals by families eager to be rid of them.

No Room for Vital Cases

At the same time hospitals, because of the permanent dwellers, lack accommodations for such vital cases as tuberculosis sufferers.

The sharply rising costs of medical care are shown in the fact that the Labor government originally budgeted on the basis of 5 million dollars being sufficient annual payment for all physicians' services. Today the budget exceeds 25 million dollars. In part this is laid to over consultation of physicians by anxious patients, whose opportunity of nursing their neuroses has been enlarged by the free system.

The mounting cost of medical care is due in part to fruitful rackets which have blossomed since physicians found that medicine could be put on the production line.

Put Patients Thru Quickly

The National Medical council has knowledge of some physicians who put thru patients at a rate exceeding 15 per hour. It knows of others who hold visiting appointments to state institutions where they get signed claims on state funds from every inmate after each visit and collect thousands of dollars yearly for working one afternoon a week.

They know of physicians who deposit prescriptions and unsigned claims on the social security fund with pharmacists and have the patients sign them without ever seeing a doctor.

The government has declined to take corrective action on the ground that the income tax stands at 77½ cents on the dollar and the treasury gets most of the money back that way.

Because of high pressure methods, which New Zealand physicians charge are used mostly by alien physicians, the standard of medical care has slumped. It is generally admitted that physicians deny care to cases presenting complications and dispatch them to hospitals.

Must Pay for Surgery

The average citizen can get into a hospital if he has a priority, but once there must take whatever service happens along. He is not permitted to select his surgeon even for the most delicate operation. And if he shies off he must pay for his own surgical treatment.

Along with these things has been the promotion of a morbid psychology among people now more conscious of their aches and pains than ever before.

The result of years of this conditioning is now apparent on the state owned radio, where a large part of the revenue comes from advertising various nostrums.

The hospital system is financed roughly one-third each by the social security fund, national taxation, and local taxes. The result of this costly set-up has been alarming. This year hospital costs will absorb 22 cents on the dollar of all local taxes paid in Wellington and taxes for maintaining public hospitals, which rose 20 per cent in 1944, will be increased almost 40 per cent over last year.

Indict Confessed Slayer of Employer for Murder

He will be arraigned Dec. 17 in the Circuit court in Crown Point. Wehle is accused of killing Heywood, a south side electrical shop owner, in Heywood's cabin at Cedar Lake, Ind., last July 2.

AGREE BENNETT FLED SINGAPORE ON SURRENDER

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 28 (AP)—Witnesses at a public hearing into the escape of Australian Lt. Gen. H. Gordon Bennett from Singapore when the Japs seized the city in 1942 agreed today that Bennett did not leave until he received orders from the British commander to cease firing.

Lt. Col. C. H. Kappe, who was chief signals officer for Bennett, said he received an order that British forces had capitulated at 5:45 p. m., Feb. 15, 1942, and that firing would cease at 8:30 p. m. Other witnesses all agreed that Bennett did not leave his headquarters before 8:30 or 9 p. m.

Kappe said he believed the order said that officers were to remain with their men and not to attempt to escape. Bennett previously was accused of being the only unit commander who did not remain.

U. S. AND BRITAIN VOTE PRESS RATE OF 6½C A WORD

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 28 (AP)—A maximum press rate of 6½ cents a word between the United States and British empire points except the United Kingdom, was approved today by the press subcommittee of the telecommunications conference. It replaces tariffs ranging from 14 to 24 cents.

American communication companies proposed the reductions subject to approval by the federal communications commission.

The new rate includes transmission from "gateways" to the final destination for which there is currently added charge in the United States. For example, the rate between Bombay and New York is now 14 cents, but between Bombay and San Francisco it is 18 cents. The accepted rate will be the same between all cities.

TRUMAN HEALTH SCHEME CALLED MEDIC SLAVERY

President Truman's recent proposal to congress of compulsory sickness insurance legislation and establishment of a nation-wide system of government supported health agencies was denounced yesterday by the Journal of the American Medical association as an "attempt to enslave medicine as first among the professions, industries, or trades to be socialized."

In an editorial, the publication urged defeat of the five point program and called upon "those who believe in the American democracy" to rally "now, if ever," in their condemnation of the measure by which, the Journal said, "doctors in America would become clock watchers and slaves of a system."

Truman's Figures Challenged

Challenging the figures cited by the President in his message as to the number of draft registrants rejected for health reasons, the publication declared "that every fundamental principle of the scientific interpretation of statistics has been violated by the proponents" of compulsory insurance to serve as propaganda.

"Men who were rejected as physically unfit for military service in the first year of war were accepted as quite fit for complete service in the latter years of the war," the Journal said.

A. M. A. Never Consulted

The President, the social security board, or any of the other advocates of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill introduced to carry out Mr. Truman's recommendations, the editorial contended, never have made the slightest attempt to consult with representatives of the American Medical association representing more than 125,000 American physicians.

Advocates of socialized medicine, the Journal added, have rallied to their support the socialistic element in the American Public Health association and those employed in governmental health agencies "who thirst for increased power and expansion of the bureaus that they serve."

GARDENERS GET TIP ON HOW TO GROW PLANTS WITHOUT SUN OR SOIL

Two horticultural scientists yesterday told gardeners how they can propagate flowers, vegetables, trees, and shrubs in corners of their basements without soil or sunlight. They spoke at a meeting of the Chicago Horticultural society in the La Salle hotel.

Dr. Vernon T. Stoutemyer of the United States department of agriculture station at Glendale, Md., described a basement "greenhouse" he has devised in which seedlings and cuttings grow in vermiculite, a mineral, with heat and light provided by fluorescent, neon, and cathode tubes.

Dr. Alice Withrow, a physicist of Purdue university, complemented Dr. Stoutemyer's data by reporting the latest experimental work in soilless culture and the effect of various spectrum colors in the growth rate of plants. George W. Crane, psychologist and author of Test Your Horse Sense, a daily feature of THE TRIBUNE, expounded the soulful advantages of gardening in the great outdoors.

DEFEAT BRITISH MOVE FOR DELAY ON UNO CAPITAL

Hearings on Site to Begin Saturday

BY WILLIAM FULTON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 28—A seven-man subcommittee of the united nations preparatory commission today overrode stalling tactics by the United Kingdom and decided to start hearings Saturday on the question of a site for permanent headquarters. Chicago's delegation and pleaders for 21 other sites in the United States are to present their cases.

[An Associated Press poll indicated that of the seven nations represented on the subcommittee, Australia, Colombia, Cuba, Iran, and Yugoslavia favored the United States site, the Netherlands wants Europe, and Egypt is undecided. The poll further indicated that 22 of the 51 nations in the UNO would vote for the United States. Ten delegates favored a site in the eastern United States and the nine favored San Francisco.]

Debate Over Hearings

The decision to start hearings for the various delegations was taken after considerable debate in the general questions committee which comprises representatives of each of the 51 countries.

The Belgian foreign minister, Paul Henri Spaak, started carrying the ball for the British. He contended that the preparatory commission should first determine the requirements of a permanent location before going into the practical aspects.

Adlai Stevenson of Bloomington, Ill., acting American delegate who has hopeful delegations from all parts of the United States camping on his doorstep and extoling their civic advantages, pointed out that the Americans could not be expected to remain in London indefinitely.

Compromise Is Effected

Stevenson said: "I must point out that the major executive body of this body recommended a site in the United States. The general assembly of the united nations meeting in January will make the final decision, but these delegations here should be allowed to make their cases now."

A compromise finally was effected upon motion by L. D. Wilgress, Canadian ambassador to Russia. He suggested a subcommittee be appointed to hear the delegations from the United States or anywhere else, with hearings to start Saturday.

Provision for hearings to be open to the press was incorporated upon the urging of Stoyan Gavrilovic, Yugoslavia's undersecretary of foreign affairs.

"You'd better sleep awhile, dear. We don't want any more complaints from that man in the apartment below us."

Britain to Be Asked if It Will Try Unity Mitford

LONDON, Nov. 29 [Reuters]—Garry Allighan, Labor member of parliament, will ask the British government in the house of commons next Wednesday "whether it is proposed to prosecute Miss Unity Mitford, who returned to Britain from Germany in 1940 after consorting with the enemy during the war while having benefit of a British passport."

RAIL MAN DIES OF INJURIES

William Byl, 68, of 234 Englewood av., a railroad claim clerk, died yesterday in St. Bernard's hospital of injuries suffered Saturday when he was struck by one street car and tossed into the path of a second street car at 63d st. and Wentworth av.

CANADA TO GIVE FURLOUGHS TO OVERSEAS MEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 28—Canadian soldiers on occupational duty in Germany and at permanent Canadian establishments in the United Kingdom may now return to Canada on 30 days' rotation leave, the department of national defense announced today. The new leave system is applicable only to those who, after long service overseas, are required to continue serving overseas for a substantial period.

The eligible personnel must have served continuously outside the Americas for three years and have repatriation scores of 150 or more. Monthly quotas have been set at 150 from Germany and 50 from the United Kingdom.

INJURED WOMAN DIES IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Jesse F. Leathers, 76, of 5247 Magnolia av., who was injured in a fall on the front steps of her home, died yesterday in Wesley Memorial hospital.

F.D.R. NEIGHBORS OUT TO BE HOSTS TO WORLD GROUP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 28—Neighbors of the late President Roosevelt and New Deal political figures who are attempting to bring international headquarters of the allied nations organization to this community, today prepared to send an emissary to London in furtherance of their campaign.

Benson Frost, a Poughkeepsie attorney, will present Dutchess county's elaborately prepared bid when he arrives in London by air in a few days to join groups representing Chicago and 21 other American cities that are seeking selection by the world organization.

As emissary, Frost is substituting for Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador, who was unable to make the trip. Others among a national group of 15 behind the campaign are John E. Mack, who twice nominated Mr. Roosevelt for the Presidency; Sen. Wagner [D., N. Y.], and Henry Morgenthau Jr., former treasury secretary.

Local Group Formed

A local committee of 25 was also organized by Charles Conger, executive secretary of the Poughkeepsie Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is "vitally interested in the success of our efforts," but is not an official member of either group, Conger said. "The American Legion and all other local organizations are behind us," he added. "We've just heard from London that we're still in the running."

Advantages claimed for a Dutchess county location include the assumed availability of more than a thousand acres along the Hudson river which former estate owners have turned over to the federal government. Proximity to New York City and the sentimental value of headquarters near Mr. Roosevelt's Hyde Park grave are also set forth in elaborate brochures.

Includes Memorial Area.

Along with two former private estates, the thousand acres includes the area occupied by the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial library.

The committee assumes that another plot will be available for construction of world organization headquarters when the government formally takes over the Roosevelt mansion at Hyde Park.

Of 13 former estates along the east bank of the Hudson in Dutchess county, nine have been deeded to federal or state governments or to charitabe organizations. The fact that these nine properties are no longer subject to local taxes has brought criticism from remaining property owners who pay the local tax bills.

YANKS TO GUARD GERMAN TRAINS THRU RED ZONE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Germany, Nov. 28—American trains carrying German ex-prisoners of war to the United States zone and trains carrying German refugees from former reich areas to our zone are to carry eight GI's armed with carbines and pistols to prevent passengers from being robbed and baggage looted. Heretofore when the Russians stopped American trains traversing the Red army zone the people aboard have been held up and searched for valuables, food, clothing, and blankets by "unknown persons wearing Red army uniforms," reports state.

CHURCHILL RIPS 'FEEBLENESS' OF LABOR CABINET

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP)—Winston Churchill protested what he called the "incompetence and feebleness" of the British Labor government today and pledged his Conservative opposition to a fight for speedy demobilization and reconversion.

Decrying "the plight into which our country has fallen," the former prime minister told the Conservative party's central council:

"We are being harassed, harried, tied down, and stifled for vaguely and physically unattainable plans for a socialist future."

He admonished the Conservative leadership to gain vote appeal.

"I foresee, with sorrow but without fear, that in the next few years we shall come to fundamental quarrels in this country," Churchill said somberly. "It will be the people versus the Socialists. Between them lies the impending shock and we must be prepared to meet it as the people's party."

Churchill said demobilization was "proceeding at a rate far below what any efficient administration would have achieved."

"There is no military reason to justify keeping more than 4,000,000 men in service at the present time."

CHICAGOAN DIES IN GERMANY AS PLANE CRASHES

SGT. JOSEPH J. KLEIN, 25, flight engineer, was killed accidentally Oct. 1 when a plane transporting personnel from Merville, France, to Oberpfaffenhofen, Germany, was demolished southeast of Stuttgart, Germany, his mother, Mrs. Angeline Klein of 1851 W. 21st st. has learned from the war department. The cause of the accident is unknown. Sgt. Klein was buried in the United States military cemetery at St. Avold, France, Oct. 3, with full military honors. He is survived by his mother, three brothers, and two sisters.

"No need for both of us to make fools of ourselves. You go down and make some hints about how late it's getting."

SEWER UPKEEP HELD DUTY OF REALTY OWNER

The city council committee on judiciary, headed by Ald. Brody [39th], voted yesterday to recommend passage of an ordinance requiring property owners to maintain their sewers and sewer connections with city mains in good condition. Ald. Moss [5th], who introduced the proposed ordinance, and Thomas D. Garry, city superintendent of sewers, told the committee that many cave-ins of streets and sidewalks in recent years are traceable to improperly maintained private sewers. Thru the contemplated measure, property owners would be obliged to make repairs upon notification by the city sewer department or permit the department to undertake the repairs at the owners' expense.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Nov. 29—Battle of Knoxville

ON Nov. 29, 1863, Confederate Gen. James Longstreet made one last attempt to break the Union grip on Knoxville, in eastern Tennessee.

Trouble and discouragement had attended him ever since his departure from the vicinity of Chattanooga. His superior, Gen. Braxton Bragg, had instructed him to destroy Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside's Union army of the Ohio and to occupy Knoxville, but these orders turned out to be easier to issue than to execute.

In the first place, Longstreet found himself in country where the populace was hostile. [There was much pro-Union sentiment in eastern Tennessee during the Civil war.] Secondly, the energetic and skilful Burnside harried his advance and compelled numerous readjustments in his plans. Besides these troubles, there were irritations that sprang from the halfheartedness and even the insubordination of his own men.

Finally, after Burnside had retired into Knoxville and gained sufficient time to fortify it strongly, Longstreet realized that a major assault would have to be made quickly.

He ordered an advance on Fort Sanders, which defended the town. The ranks moved ahead, only to encounter an inferno of fire from the Union positions. The attacking soldiers began falling—singly, in groups, then by the hundred. In all, some 1,000 men were lost before the despairing Confederates gave up the assault.

New Poison Causes Rats to Drown Themselves

Discovery of a new poison, which causes rats to drown in their own body fluids, was reported yesterday in the Journal of the American Medical association. The poison, developed after three years of war time experimentation, is known as ANTU [alphanaphthyl thiourea]. Curt P. Richter, a chemist at the Phipps Psychiatric clinic at Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, Md., who is credited with the discovery, said the poison is not harmful to human beings unless taken in large quantities.

DOWNS 10TH JAP, LAST OF WAR, ON V-J MORNING

BY ORVILLE DWYER

Lt. Comdr. T. Hamil Reidy, 32, of Highland Park, who already had shot down nine Jap planes, radioed his squadron, "I'll take him."

Lt. Comdr. Reidy

Unloading the 1,000 pound bomb hanging on his Corsair fighter into Tokyo Bay, he dropped out of formation and plunged down on the kamikaze's tail. Three bursts from his guns dropped the enemy into the bay—Reidy's 10th Jap plane shot down and the last downed by a United States airman in the war.

"It happened at 5:35 a. m. V-J day, Aug. 15, over Tokyo," the flyer said yesterday. "I was quite tickled about it when I landed back on the Essex.

Kamikaze Seeking Ship

"Our dozen planes were over Tokyo bay, heading for Atsugi air field, our objective, when we saw this lone Jap headed out to sea. There is no doubt he was a kamikaze bent on suicide bombing a ship. I told the boys I'd take him and dropped my bomb for the fight. I remember looking at my watch as he dropped into the bay. It was just 5:35 a. m. Seven minutes later the word came over the radio that the war was over and to return to the carrier.

"We'd heard the war was going to end for days, but each day we had gone in again. It got so we didn't put any stock in it. Then when we suddenly got the word, we went wild.

"All the rest of the boys dropped their bombs into the bay and we put on, over Tokyo bay, one of the craziest flying circuses anybody's ever seen. We stunted and rolled, and then somebody started firing red stars from his rocket gun. In the next minute all the rest had their rocket guns shooting, and there were more pretty stars in that sky then Tokyo ever saw before.

Won Air Medal, D. F. C.

"I was the last to land on the Essex. When I got down they told me I'd got the last Jap plane of the war."

Reidy, now on an 83 day leave, married Barbara Tennant of Highland Park in 1942 and lives at 273 Central av., in that suburb. They have two sons, Dustin, 2, and James, 10 months. He won the navy cross, the distinguished flying cross with four stars, and the air medal with nine stars. He entered the navy in January, 1942, and expects to return to his former job as a sales engineer for the Bethlehem Steel corp.

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 28 (AP)—Henry F. Grady, San Francisco, Cal., head of an American delegation to observe the approaching Greek elections, arrived here today. He was accompanied by Foy Kholer of the state department and Lt. Gen. Harry Maloney, members of the delegation.

REVEAL MAC ARTHUR RADIO ON DISCHARGE OF MACNIDER'S SON

TOKYO, Japan, Nov. 28 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur relayed to marine corps headquarters a request by Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider that his son, Pvt. Jack MacNider, be permitted to return home from Tokyo, but MacArthur has no knowledge of young MacNider's discharge, a headquarters spokesman said today.

The spokesman made public this exchange of radio messages involving Pvt. MacNider, whose return and discharge with 38 points, marine corps headquarters said, were "in accordance with the radio request of Gen. MacArthur":

"To Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, marine corps commandant: MacNider very anxious bring his son Pvt. 1st Class Jack MacNider, 5th marine division, now on furlough in Tokyo back with him to United States to continue his medical schooling. If you can authorize such procedure be glad arrange air transportation for return with his father to United States where he will report any station you may designate."

The reply: "Procedure outlined is authorized. Please [illegible] 1st Class MacNider report marine barracks naval training center, Great Lakes, Ill., duty, and grant him 30 days' delay en route if he so desires."

MacArthur has no administration over marine corps personnel, and the message exchange speaks for itself, the headquarters spokesman commented.

Norway Attorney General Gets Threat After Blast

OSLO, Norway, Nov. 28 [Reuters]—After an explosion at the Oslo house of Sven Arntzen, Norway's attorney general, an anonymous telephone caller told him: "This is merely a warning. The next time it will be serious."

M'NIDER'S SON'S RELEASE DRAWS FIRE IN HOUSE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Military release of a general's son by special order drew criticism in the house today and a call for immediate discharge of all medical students in the armed forces.

Rep. Reed [R., N. Y.] told the house he "deplored the favoritism shown" in discharging 18 year old Marine Pvt. Jack MacNider, whose father is Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider.

The youth, a pre-medical student with service on Iwo Jima and other Pacific fighting zones behind him since his enlistment in February, 1944, had 38 of the 50 points normally required for marine release.

The marine corps said he was "returned to the United States and discharged in accordance with a radio request of Gen. MacArthur. At MacArthur headquarters in Tokyo, however, a spokesman said MacArthur had only relayed a request of Gen. MacNider for permission for the son to return.

AMERICA BETWEEN TWO IMPERIALISMS

No more solemn warning of the ruinous course along which the United States is being conducted by its foreign minded career diplomats in the state department has ever been addressed to the American people than is the statement accompanying Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley's resignation as ambassador to China. For once, at least, in these disjointed times a high government official has chosen to tell the country the facts of life instead of engaging in lies or meaningless ambiguities.

The truth of Gen. Hurley's assertions is so self-evident that the administration can no longer evade its responsibilities to the nation. It must first of all clean out the state department. It must then adopt and prosecute a foreign policy which for once will make the security and welfare of the United States the paramount and, indeed, the sole concern of American diplomacy. That policy will never be put into practice as long as the career men of the state department are agents of the two kinds of imperialism represented by Great Britain and Russia and are completely indifferent to America, except as they may employ its power and resources to advance the foreign ideologies of their adoption.

Gen. Hurley's account of his own experiences in China shows how a sincere American patriot, devoted to no cause except that of his own country, found himself frustrated and his country sold out at every turn by the state department men who were intriguing behind his back. He said that they were of two types: men who gave aid and support to the Chinese Communists because they were on the side of Russia and of communism, and men who strengthened the hand of the Chinese Communists because a weak and disunited China would best serve British interests.

The American policy which Gen. Hurley was instructed to carry out in China was intended to strengthen the central government and keep it in the war. "The professional foreign service men sided with the Chinese communist armed party and the imperialist bloc of nations whose policy it was to keep China divided against herself," the general said. "Our professional diplomats continuously advised the Communists that my efforts in preventing the collapse of the national government did not represent the policy of the United States."

Gen. Hurley demanded and obtained the relief of these career men who were opposing their own government's policy, only to find that when they were recalled to Washington they were placed in the Chinese and far eastern divisions of the state department as his supervisors. Some of them were assigned as advisers to Gen. MacArthur in order that they might fight his efforts to stabilize Japan and Asia. "In such positions," Gen. Hurley asserted, "most of them have continued to side with the communist armed party and at times with the imperialist bloc against American policy."

The results of this traitorous conduct as evaluated by Gen. Hurley are that there is an astonishing discrepancy between our announced policies and our actual conduct of international relations; that principles such as the Atlantic Charter which were supposed to represent our war aims have been abandoned in practice while we furnish lend-lease supplies and use all our reputation to undermine liberty and bolster imperialism and communism; and that we "have failed completely to couple our logistical strength with our foreign policy to obtain commitments to the principles for which we claimed to be fighting from the nations to which we gave the strength of our productivity and man power."

What has America got out of its two world wars and this kind of diplomacy? As Gen. Hurley makes clear, precisely nothing. It has sacrificed more than a quarter of a million lives, taken back three-quarters of a million of its sons after they have been maimed or shattered in mind, and run up a debt approaching 300 billion dollars. It has received in return neither commercial advantages nor the promise of peace. Instead, its policies are fostering a new and more devastating war in which America again cannot expect a single benefit for itself, but will be a volitionless force cast into the balance once more by its war making fifth column.

And to what end? To none, except the aggrandizement of British imperialism or communist imperialism, whichever prevails if the tug and haul is permitted to continue among the nation's faithless architects of international policy. "America has been excluded economically from every part of the world controled by colonial imperialism and communist imperialism," Gen. Hurley said. "America's economic strength has been used all over the world to defeat American policies and interests."

In these circumstances we cannot win. We can only serve to help an abhorrent foreign system achieve world domination thru our efforts. This is an idiot's choice, but there is still time to say "A plague on both your houses." We should compel our government and the state department to cease making America the instrument of either British imperialism or communist imperialism, or both of them, and to dedicate themselves anew to the United States alone—first, last, and always.

LINCOLN REVISED

When Gov. Dewey tried to take a hand in the recent New York mayoralty election Mayor La Guardia followed him on the radio and got off the aphorism, "We had expected to hear the explosion of an atomic bomb, but all we heard was the snap of a wad of bubble gum." The Hat, who is not too often right, was right in this judgment. Dewey had about as much influence on the election as a popcorn wagon whistle. Of 23 members elected to the city council, the Republicans placed three, which was only one more than the Communists and three less than the combined representation won by the three left wing parties. The Democrats were far out in front with 14.

Mr. Dewey, the gentleman farmer of Pawling, is the choice of the Park avenue snobs who fawn upon British aristocracy, of the Wall streeters who think they can preserve the common touch by reading room contacts with their own sort in the right clubs, and of some of the Westchester county crowd that tries to imitate the life of the English landed gentry. The whole pack and parcel, from Squire Dewey down, couldn't recognize an ordinary voter even if they were disposed to acknowledge his existence.

The Republican party in New York has revised Lincoln's principle and operates on the program of government of the 400, by the 400, for the 400. Electoral majorities are not to be found that way, and that accounts for the vanishing performance of Mr. Dewey and the Republican party in New York.

THE WHOLE TRUTH?

The nature of the Nuernberg trial becomes clearer with each day's proceedings.

"For hour after hour," says the Associated Press correspondent at Nuernberg, "United States Assistant Prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman hammered relentlessly with scores of documents showing that German military and naval leaders started rearming shortly after World War I. Major disclosures during the day were:

"Even before the Nazis took power German submarines were being built secretly in Holland, Spain, and Finland. . . . As early as October, 1932, the Germans were secretly building up a military air force in civilian guise by organizing and training air line pilots for combat. On Jan. 31, 1933, the day after Hitler came to power, the Nazis secretly issued plans to build a great armament industry."

The last item is obviously relevant. The others, disclosing what the pre-Nazi governments of Germany were doing, can have no conceivable bearing on the guilt of the defendants in this case. A court of justice would have so ruled. The fact that this court permitted the irrelevant documents to go into the record proves that it isn't a court of justice.

This is a propaganda trial. Mr. Justice Jackson knows, Mr. Alderman knows, and every judge on the bench at Nuernberg knows that the principal activities of the Germans in rearmament, before the Nazis came to power, took place in Russia, with the full knowledge, consent, and approval of the bolsheviks. The facts have been printed hundreds of times in scores of publications. The story was told in detail, for example, by W. G. Krivitsky in the Saturday Evening Post of June 1, 1940. It was told again in Rosinski's work on the German army, published in the same year by Harcourt, Brace & Co. The following year it appeared again in Frederick Schuman's "Night Over Europe," published by Knopf.

"Under the leadership of Gen. von Seekt [sic], creator of the reichswehr," says the Williams college professor, "German and Russian officers inaugurated secret military collaboration as intimate and continuous as if the two states had been allies. . . . This collaboration was undisturbed until the fall of the German republic."

David J. Dallin, in "Russia and Post-War Europe," published in 1943 by the Yale University Press, says:

"German military men arrived in Russia at the end of 1921 and the coöperation continued until the middle '30s. German plants supplied military aircraft, machinery, and so forth. Russia, in turn, gave Germany the right to use Russian territory for conducting military experiments and other operations which Germany could not, by the terms of the Versailles treaty, conduct on her own territory."

There is no lack of testimony on this point, and yet Mr. Alderman made no mention of it. If testimony regarding German rearmament before the Nazis came to power is relevant in a trial of Nazis, then, surely, the facts about the invaluable help that Stalin gave are relevant. These facts, however, were omitted, no doubt in deference to Russian sensibilities. On the other hand, the relatively minor part that Finland and Spain may have played in German rearmament at this time is given great emphasis. These two countries are in the Russian doghouse and mention of them serves the ends of Russian propaganda.

As we have said on many occasions, the Nazis on trial at Nuernberg are guilty of murder, it can easily be proved, and they should be hanged for their crimes. What we are seeing is less a trial of these men for the offenses they committed than a forum for the spread of propaganda intended to justify every stupidity and brutality that is being committed in Europe today by the victors. This trial is intended, among other things, to end all protests against enslaving, looting, and starving our former enemies by showing that the Nazis only carried to fruition the plans of the German republic. As a veteran New Dealer, Mr. Justice Jackson knows all the tricks of the smear brigade.

From all we hear and read about it, there was plenty of warning before Pearl Harbor, but everybody thought it was a military secret, so they kept still about it.—Illinois State Journal.

BOOKWORM'S PARADISE

The death of Jerome Kern, a composer in the great tradition of American popular music, recalled his reputation as a collector of rare books and sent this column in search of the records of his fabulous auction sale in 1929. The catalog of that achievement in the high finance of the literary world has become a rare item, over which bibliophiles have been groaning ever since. "What inflation!" they moan. "Such prices are ridiculous." Nevertheless, that episode represents every book collector's dream of personal bliss, and smoke gets in their eyes when they think of Kern's luck—or shrewdness—in kissing his babies good-by at the top of the market.

* * *

The total value of the sales tickets at the close of the Kern auction was $1,729,462.50. This was a close second to the national championship mark, established by the sale of the Robert Hoe collection. Total items sold, 1,482; average price per item, $1,167, a record which still stands.

* * *

Kern's collecting was largely in the field of English literature, with emphasis on "association" items. A few details of the final bidding, with Kern's purchase prices in brackets, will illustrate the didos of that glad, mad day among the bibliophiles, just before the greatest boom in history became the saddest depression:

Shelley's "Queen Mab," with manuscript revisions, $68,000 [$6,000].

"Tom Jones," first edition, $29,000 [$3,000].

One hundred and thirteen Dickens items, $252,540 [up from 300 to 500 per cent].

* * *

But there is a catch in this story, for it is too good to be quite true. The stock market crashed before many of the purchasers, whose credit was excellent at the time, had settled their accounts with the auctioneer. In such cases, according to "American Book Collectors," by Carl L. Cannon, "the full amounts bid were never collected."

LAUGHING PHILOSOPHER

(Voltaire's statue in the Art institute.)

What, this wrinkled face and brow, and watery eye,
The home of that great brain; is this the one
Who used the sword of jest so valiantly,
Whose lusty satire made the monarchs run?
Is this small, seated form that leans and smiles
The personage whose fiery tongue and pen
Lifted his witty scorn a thousand miles
To let it spill like lava over men
And burn to ashes superstitious creeds;
Whose laughing, lucid reasoning could kill
Where choking bigotry like thriving weeds
Had all but overgrown the human will?
Yes, this is he; to whom no doubt our debt
Is still unpaid and drawing interest yet.

The Doctor's Dilemma

The doctor laid aside his stethoscope, pursed his lips, and said:

"You'll have to give up smoking."

"That won't be hard, Doc, since I've never smoked."

"That's easy. I haven't taken a drink for 20 years."

"Um, you shouldn't drive a car."

"That's another habit I've never acquired."

"Um, you shouldn't walk more than a mile a day."

"Say, I never walked a mile any day of my life. The easy chair has too much appeal."

"Well, I'm afraid I can't help you."

"But, Doc, I'm a sick man!"

"I know. But there doesn't seem to be anything I can order you not to do." W. L. Hudson

Pullman's Lost Theater

Frieda Zimmerman's "ghost theater of Calumet" [Nov. 21] has vanished, with the Arcade of which it was a part. This site has been serving as a parking lot for many years. Because it was classed as a loft theater, and therefore dangerous, the house was closed after the Iroquois theater fire in 1903. A few years later it was reopened for a short period.

Minnie Johnson Schachner

The ghost theater of Calumet was, indeed, beautiful, and it flourished for many years. Many famous actors played one-night stands there. But the Arcade, which contained it, was torn down long ago and now there is only an empty block southwest of the Hotel Florence in Pullman. Henry W. Lee

J. C. L. writes: "My sister's husband was reported missing during the Battle of the Bulge. So far we have not received any further information from the government as to whether he is alive or dead. In the event that the army does declare him dead, will his widow receive his insurance and a pension? Is it possible to receive both checks at the same time?"

If the war department notifies your sister that her husband may be presumed to be dead she then becomes eligible for payments on his national service life insurance, for a widow's pension, to collect his accrued pay, and for six months' gratuity pay. She also may be eligible for payments on his social security. Payments on the insurance will depend upon your sister's age and which of two options she selects. These payments will continue until the full amount of the policy has been paid. The widow's pension is payable only so long as she remains unmarried. If she is married again she loses her pension rights forever, but if there are any children they may obtain a pension until they are 18 or until 21 if attending school.

I. S. writes: "I am a veteran of World War II. I was honorably discharged at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., Nov. 20, 1943. The reason for my discharge is given as 'C. D. per 2d Ind.' I would like to know if the army will take me back. What does the notation on my discharge mean?"

The notation means certificate of disability per second indorsement on your service. The army may take you back if the disability no longer exists. Apply to the recruiting station, 166 Van Buren st.

DOES ALCOHOL CAUSE CIRRHOSIS OF THE LIVER?

ANY discussion of cirrhosis of the liver turns to the rôle of alcohol in its production. This has been a controversial point for many years and stems from the fact that over half the victims are boozers.

Whisky, gin, and brandy are usually named as the culprits. It was the opinion of older investigators that it was not so much the alcohol as the impurities that enter as by-products in the manufacturing process. In small quantities, thes were probably not poisonous, but when consumed day after day for years it was thought that degeneration of the hepatic cells resulted. Others blamed the fact that when liquors were stored in copper containers, minute amounts of this metal went into solution and contaminated the contents.

On the other hand, more recent studies point out that only 5 per cent of chronic inebriates are afflicted and that in Syria and India, where cirrhosis is common, few of the inhabitants imbibe. Furthermore, it is difficult to produce the malady in experimental animals by administering these spirits and cirrhosis can occur in children, who unquestionably never "drank." To a certain extent, the evidence favors the opinion that distilled beverages are not factors.

But why is it that so many cirrhotics are alcoholics? This can be explained chiefly on the basis of poor eating habits. Many subsist on only one meal a day, finding coffee and cocktails sufficient to satisfy appetite. This has been confirmed on laboratory animals, particularly when a deficiency of proteins, carbohydrates, and vitamins was induced. Altho I doubt that the old time saloonkeeper was thinking of his customer's health when he served free lunches, this prophylactic measure certainly forestalled the development of the hobnail condition.

The liver can be damged by infection, but since it has so much reserve strength, no harm results from an acute attack. Nevertheless, repeated bouts may affect the cells gradually. Ultimately scar tissue replaces the normal substance and hardening occurs. Such drugs as chloroform, cinchophen, and phosphorus may be responsible, and syphilis and blood flukes must also be considered as possible sources of atrophy.

As a rule, 10 to 15 years pass before destruction is severe enough to impair health. Unfortunately, more than one-third of the patients are unaware that the disorder exists until it is far advanced. In others, telltale digestive symptoms appear. Biliousness, with loss of appetite and morning nausea, are fairly common. Many victims complain of weakness, with a tendency to perspire easily. An unexplained loss of weight is not unusual. Eventually a sallow complexion is observed and the sunken eyes are bloodshot and watery. The tiny capillaries on the cheeks and nose assume undue prominence. By this time the ankles become puffy and the abdomen protrudes as fluid fills the peritoneal space.

Early diagnosis is important and is best made by studying the blood and urine, and performing liver tests. Unless well advanced, most cases will improve on a nutritious diet supplemented with vitamins, especially the B complex group. The typical menus are rich in carbohydrates, moderate in proteins, and low in fat. Various products have proved useful, including brewer's yeast, choline, and methionine. Liver extract and blood serum are of value under certain conditions.

REVERSED WRITING

Mrs. K. R. writes: My little son is beginning to write and his script is very peculiar. I am told it is mirror writing. Will he overcome it and is it a sign of anything?

REPLY

The phenomenon is observed frequently in children who are learning to write. In the majority it lasts a short time and disappears as the right hand becomes more facile in the use of the pen. With advancing years normal writing tends to be established. This occurrence does not reflect upon the child's mental or physical health in any way.

HOOKWORM

H. B. writes: Is ground itch the same as hookworm?

REPLY

Yes, altho the former refers to the early manifestations. It is at this time that the parasite worms its way into the body, usually via the feet. Those who walk barefoot in infested regions are more prone to pick up the invaders from the ground, hence the name. It is also called "creeping eruption."

Firemen in Lake Geneva, Wis., became so excited one night last week when they heard the town's fire whistle blow that they rushed, one by one, to the scene, each man in his private car. Once there, they realized they had forgotten their fire truck.

Santa Claus Gets There

Pvt. Ken Hughes writes from Manila that an infantry sergeant, stationed in Manila since its liberation, has just received [Nov. 17] the Christmas package mailed to him by his family in October, 1944. He was very happy to get it, as he was sailing for home on a troop transport the next day.

Manila, Mr. Hughes claims, is the Barbary coast revived, not so much the gay '90s dazzle as it is frayed oriental magnificence. Its wartorn streets are lined with shanty liquor stores and night clubs [the latter named variously Atomic Bomb, Pinup, Radio City, and Continental], and whisky sells for $4.50 a pint for something called Black Label, the only safe one. Other native hairraisers, he writes, combine gasoline, turpentine, and raw grain alcohol "because the GI he want beeg keeck." The result generally is black-out or St. Vitus' dance. The popular song there now, as it was in Africa that dark Christmas of 1942, is one Bing Crosby made famous, rendered by the night club queens of Manila as "I am-m-m dweeming of-f a vit-t Quitmus!" Over it all hangs the mystery of the gigantic black market, estimated at 9 million dollars. Army trucks are hijacked by guerrilla bands and reappear on the black market for $30,000. GI cigarets, bought by the racketeers for $2.50 a carton, sell for 50 cents a package.

The Silent Scot

A gentleman who hides under the initials W. F. S. went to Mason lake resort to shoot [at] deer. His guide was Alex Nicol, a long, dour Scotsman, an excellent guide but a silent companion. The first day out they headed for Lower Price lake. It was hard for him to hold the pace set by Alex's long legs. He tried futilely to get him to talk, Alex having the same distaste for conversation that some persons have for an icy shower or for jumping off a precipice. About the middle of the morning he asked Alex to show him a Norway pine. There was no immediate reply, but an hour later he paused and, with an unenthusiastic gesture, indicated a magnificent pine beside the trail. "Yon's one," he said. They had a fine but wordless lunch; the hunter missed two shots [due to circumstances unimportant except to the deer and him], and by midafternoon were headed [silently] for camp. Alex was far ahead when he stopped and waited. A short distance off the trail a great pine towered above the smaller trees. "Yon's another," he said.

Cod Liver Oil

A young man just back from 30 months in the Pacific, where he was executive officer on an aircraft carrier, has a daughter who was 12 when he left home. Out in the Pacific he had had an arduous time, so much so that when he returned to this country recently his weight was down to 119 pounds. All the way home he thought of how he would take his small daughter in his arms, as he had done when he told her good-by, and toss her into the air. When he came in the door it was the daughter who lifted him off the floor. She tossed him into the air and kissed him.

WE NEED HOG BUYER DIPLOMACY

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 26—"Asked by Gesell if he distinguished between the fleet's being insecure in its Pearl Harbor base and its being unready for war, Welles said there is 'little difference to a layman' in the two terms," says a news report. Now, it may be conceded that even a large, efficient fleet could have been destroyed at Pearl Harbor. Contrariwise, even if the fleet had been based on San Diego, we could have been forced into the war, but within a week or two would have been able to operate from there to the Japs' serious disadvantage. The distinction should be obvious to any layman outside the state department.

Again, Mr. Hull testifies that his note of Nov. 26 was no ultimatum, but that the Jap note of the 20th was one. If the Jap note was an ultimatum, then any demurrer was an acceptance of the challenge and a signal for war; essentially, therefore, our own ultimatum. Does Mr. Hull underestimate our intelligence or doesn't he know any better?

Perhaps, after all, it is not that the British diplomat is particularly wily and dangerous. The trouble may be only the effect of our custom of choosing diplomats from among our less alert citizens. These intellectually poor but honest men are prepared to believe and repeat any nonsense emanating from a British source. What we need as secretary of state is some man with the basic temperament and common sense of a middle west hog buyer.

RE-ENLIST OR BOT

OKINAWA, Nov. 11—I have 91 points and so far I am not even on a shipping list to be returned to the states. The transport Admiral Benson left for the United States a few days ago full of troops with 80 to 85 points. When I and others like me asked why we didn't rate passage along with lower point men we were told by the officers and clerks in the 25th replacement depot headquarters that they were busy and not to bother them.

One of the highest priorities on the island goes to those troops reënlisting. Regardless of points, combat credit or time overseas, the men who reënlist go home with slight delay.

NO BOAT, NO VOTE

BATANGAS, P. I., Nov. 19—Just six days ago I mailed 2,100 letters to the first sergeants of army outfits thruout the Pacific, inviting them to post "No Boat, No Vote" pledges on their bulletin boards and to send me all the signatures obtained. There has not been time to hear from distant points, of course, but in this six day period I have had replies from 14 outfits stationed in our little town and the first eight replies from the Manila area arrived in this afternoon's mail. I expect hundreds of additional replies from Manila in the next couple of weeks, as well as from Guam, Tinian, Japan, Hawaii, and elsewhere.

All of the outfits are showing unusual enthusiasm, and six of the 22 units reporting to date have pledged themselves 100 per cent to vote against all senators and representatives now in office, unless specific action is taken to speed demobilization in the next 30 days. The signatures from these 22 outfits total 3,070—and this is only the beginning.

NAVY'S MERGER PLAN CALLS FOR OVER-ALL BOARD

Would Retain Air Force, Have Secretary

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 [Special]—The navy today unveiled its own plan for unification of the nation's military services, calling for establishment of a permanent national security council but retention of the navy as an integrated service with its own air force and marine corps and a civilian secretary with direct access to the President.

Navy Secretary Forrestal unveiled the navy's answer to the army's unification demands at a press conference. With Adm. Nimitz seated beside him, Forrestal described the plan as a "sharpening" of the navy's attitude and in no sense a modification of his views opposing a merger of the army and navy as expressed before the senate military affairs committee.

The navy secretary assailed the army's merger plan as one which "does not actually provide for unification" and in practice would have an opposite effect. He said it would mean absorption of the navy by the army and would amount to a "derogation of sea power."

Autonomy for Army Flyers

Forrestal asserted that the army air forces, with particular reference to their strategic functions, should be autonomous, but added it is for congress to decide whether this can be accomplished only by splitting the war department and establishing a separate department. A single military department should not be forced upon the country to establish autonomy for the army air forces, he said.

The navy believes "an over-all rather than a piecemeal" national security plan should be evolved, especially in view of discoveries in the field of atomic energy, Forrestal said. Such an over-all plan would remedy past deficiencies, he added.

Among such deficiencies, he mentioned that the Pacific command was split, "particularly inside the army, by separation of the strategic air forces not only from the other army air forces, but also from the theater commands."

Secretariat for Council

The permanent national security council, which Forrestal recommended as the top agency for coordinating foreign and military policies, would have a permanent secretariat and would be composed of the President as chairman and the secretaries of state, war, and navy, and the head of the national resources board. The national resources board, Forrestal said, should be established to make policy decisions with respect to the mobilization of material resources, productive capacity, and man power.

The navy plan provides for a permanent joint chiefs of staff, Forrestal said, this body to originate the strategic military program and establish unified commands. There should be five members, he said, the chief of staff to the President, the army chief of staff, the commanding general of the army air forces, and two navy officers, one of them a naval aviator.

Forrestal also suggested that the national security council be assisted by a central research agency and a central intelligence agency, both to serve all departments of the government.

TWO ADMIT $5,000 IN THEFTS FROM STORE WINDOWS

Two young men arrested while attempting to enter the Lake theater, Lake and Marion sts., Oak Park, yesterday confessed ten Chicago jewelry store thefts in which they obtained loot totaling more than $5,000.

Lt. Fremont P. Nester, who questioned the pair, Paul Dunn, 19, of 2122 Warren av., and Ransford Travis, 19, 1506 Huron st., said they smashed display windows and stole valuable watches and pen and pencil sets which they sold.

Nestor said Dunn had been paroled from the Illinois State Training School for Boys, near St. Charles, in 1943 and Travis in 1942. Travis is married and has two children. Nestor said they probably will be turned over to Chicago authorities.

Mrs. Mary D. Braz of 1250 S. Karlov av. told police yesterday that burglars who broke into her home took jewelry, including her wedding ring, valued at $1,500.

Larceny of $500,000 in war bonds and money orders in a postoffice burglary in Belvidere, Boone county, was charged yesterday against Nicholas G. Montos, 30, of 2029 S. 23d av., Broadview, a fugitive from four prisons, and Paul D. Daley, 22, of 2118 S. 22d av., Broadview.

Postal Inspectors Elmer J. Holmes and F. Walter Reinhard said Montos and Daley also broke into postoffices in Charleston, Coles county; De Kalb, De Kalb county; Spring Valley, Bureau county, and in Brookfield.

Montos and Daley pleaded not guilty yesterday before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. At the request of Assistant United States Atty. Hugo Sonnenschein Jr., the defendants were held in bonds of $10,000 each for the hearing Dec. 7.

Daley, who received a medical discharge from the navy air corps in April, 1944, was arrested Oct. 13, the day after an attempted postoffice burglary in Brookfield. Montos was arrested after his finger prints were found on tools used in a burglary.

LONDON-CHICAGO PLANE REROUTED THRU NEW YORK

Weather Blamed; Kelly to Be Day Late

BY JAMES SLOAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Nov. 28—Weather finally caught up with the Chicagoland aerial ambassadors this afternoon and forced the air liner bringing them home from London to set down in New York at 5:50 p. m. [4:50 p. m. Chicago time] and wait for the snow front to move away from Chicago.

It is problematical when the plane carrying Mayor Kelly and Lt. Gov. Cross will be able to resume its flight but an official of American Airlines on board assured 16 passengers it would not be until Chicago's skies clear safely.

[American Airlines officials in Chicago said a special flight section for the Chicago passengers will leave New York Thursday morning.]

Hopeful of UNO Choice

Commenting on Chicago's efforts to become headquarters of the united nations organization, Kelly said:

"We left a commission of four men who will present Chicago's claims. It is practically decided that headquarters will be in the United States, and I feel confident that once they study our proposals they will select Chicago."

As to the English people, he said: "They are showing the same courage in reconstructing their country that they showed in fighting to protect it. They are a great people, and certainly believe firmly in themselves."

Thruout the afternoon after a lunch of filet mignon, the big DC-4 had glided effortlessly over the tundralike terrain of Newfoundland and Canada. Then came the radio flash, "All midwestern airdromes whited out."

Mayor Plays Gin Rummy

Kelly calmly continued his gin rummy game with Curtis MacDougall, professor of journalism at Northwestern university, while other passengers read, dozed or laid hasty plans to call off celebrations of arrival back home.

After a slight tussle with uncooperative winter weather over the North Atlantic, Chicagoland's flying salesmen, paused briefly at Gander, Newfoundland, this morning while the big air liner was loaded with gasoline.

De-Iced in Iceland

When the plane paused last night at Meeks air field, Iceland, a snow squall plastered its wings with a sheath of ice that would not vanish until the plane was in a heated hangar for three hours. Meanwhile, the Chicago party had an after midnight supper at Meeks field, where several Chicagoland GIs are stationed.

Kelly and Cross chatted with these Chicagoland representatives: Pvt. 1st Class Joe Wawroski, son of John and Sophie, 1627 S. Trumbull av.; Corp. Leonard Ankiewicz, 2020 N. Western av.; Sgt. Claude Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rogers, 1513 N. Keeler av., and Staff Sgt. James Witte, all of Chicago; Pvt. 1st Class Dale Burleton, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Burleton, Fond du Lac, Wis. These men have been stationed at Meeks, 40 miles from the Icelandic capital of Reykjavik, at least six months, with Burleton getting the laurels for 22 months.

Charles Robinson holds daughter, Martha Sue, 3, at hearing.

Mrs. Martha Mack, 52, of 3915 N. Hermitage av., charged with kidnaping her granddaughter, Martha Sue, 3, was discharged yesterday by Judge Irwin B. Clorfene in Felony court when he was informed that the parents, Charles Robison, 27, and Margaret, 22, are estranged.

Robison is living with his mother, Mrs. Mack, and Mrs. Robison is living in another apartment at the same address. Robison recently was discharged from the army.

Atty. Thomas A. McCaffrey told Judge Clorfene that Robision has sued for divorce. Mrs. Mack said she took Martha Sue because the child was unhappy with her mother, and left the girl with friends in Lake Forest.

AIRLINE PAYS 25 MILLION FOR 20 SUPER SHIPS

New York, Nov. 28—(AP)—Pan American World Airways announced today it had purchased 20 Boeing stratocruisers, the 65 ton, 80 passenger commercial air transport development of the Boeing B-29 Super Fortress, for delivery beginning in November, 1946.

William M. Allen, president of Boeing, said that more than 25 million dollars was involved in the transaction.

Franklin Gledhill, vice president of Pan American, said the purchase resulted from demands for "the best possible American equipment" brought on by the foreign competition "we will face over the Atlantic."

In a joint statement, officials of the firms said the planes would "open a new era of global mass transportation of passengers and cargo by air accomplished at less cost, greater speed, unprecedented comfort, and with the highest standard of reliability."

Pair of Baggage Thieves Get Year in Bridewell

William Ross, 20, of 10 E. 31st st. and Le Roy Cox, 21, of 5628 Prairie av., Negroes who pleaded guilty to stealing two dozen suitcases from railroad stations, were sentenced by Judge Gibson E. Gorman in Boys' court yesterday to one year in the Bridewell for petty larceny.

MIAMI PLANE GUESTS FETED; SHIP GROUNDED

Representatives of the city council and the Chicago Association of Commerce were among a welcoming delegation at a dinner party in the Blackstone hotel last night for special guests who were grounded in Indianapolis, Ind., after two days of trying to fly to Chicago.

The guests included mayors of southern cities and other officials, newsmen, and Miss Libby Walker, Orange bowl queen, who were aboard the City of Miami, the plane making a pre-inauguration flight on the Delta Airlines' new Chicago to Miami run. The service opens Saturday.

Bad weather grounded the plane over night Tuesday in Greenville, S. C. Trying again yesterday, the plane was down nearly three hours in Cincinnati, O., and had to land again at Indianapolis.

In Chicago the Delta's guests went to a theater and tickets bought for them were turned over to the Chicago service men's center.

FLYER RESCUED AFTER HANGING 2 DAYS IN TREE

'Chute Snagged; 4 Safe, 7 Others Hunted

Coos Bay, Ore., Nov. 28 (AP)—Fog closed down over an army plane crash scene today, hampering search for seven men still missing in a rugged wilderness after a coast guard plane from Seattle succeeded in parachuting supplies to five known survivors.

One of the survivors, Flight Officer Dave Reed, who hung by his parachute 150 feet high in a tree for two days after he had bailed out in the wooded hinterland 50 miles northeast of here, was rescued today by woodsmen.

Trudge Thru Mountains

Four of the flyers, whose plane crashed Monday, trudged thru the mountains to a farm to report the accident. They were Flight Officer Ralph Foster, Flight Officer Lloyd C. Waddell, a man identified only as Hartsook, and Maj. Frank Gaunt.

The four, who were reported in fairly good condition, said 12 men had been in the plane and all bailed out except possibly the pilot, Capt. Hugh B. McMullen, Kansas City, Kas.

The army C-46 transport was en route from Sedalia, Mo., to McChord field, Tacoma.

Save Flyer in Tree

Walhalla, S. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Lt. R. A. Phillips was rescued this afternoon from a pine tree in which he had hung 60 feet from the ground for 18 hours after he and six other army men parachuted from a disabled C-45 transport last night.

When all other means failed, the rescue party built a scaffold around the tree up to Phillips' perch. The officer was uninjured but had suffered from the severe cold.

The remaining men were found soon after the crash.

Hunt Missing Bomber

Great Falls, Mont., Nov. 28 (AP)—Search planes from Great Falls, Mont., and Cheyenne, Wyo., took off today in an effort to locate a B-25 Mitchell army bomber, reported missing yesterday in a flight from Rapid City, S. D., to Missoula, Mont. Three men, whose identity was not revealed, comprised the crew.

Flyer Walks Nine Days

San Diego, Cal., Nov. 28 [Special]—Ensign John R. Gensert, navy fighter pilot, spent nine days along the desolate eastern shores of the Gulf of California in Sonora, Mexico, after a forced landing, 11th naval district headquarters disclosed today. Gensert took off from Albuquerque, N. M., for his base at the Holtville, Cal., air station Nov. 18 in a navy Hellcat. He was forced down on the beach at a spot near the mouth of the Concepcion river, 100 miles south of the mouth of the Colorado. He began trudging north, following the shore line and walked nine days before being picked up by a navy seaplane.

W. C. T. U. HITS PEACE TRAINING; C. C. FAVORS IT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce supported and the Women's Christian Temperance union opposed today President Truman's request for one year of universal military training for the nation's able bodied male youths.

The chamber's views were given to the house military committee by Dunlap C. Clark, Kalamazoo, Mich., banker and chairman of the organization's national defense committee.

Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, Evanston, Ill., national president, and Miss Elizabeth Smart, Washington representative, spoke for the W. C. T. U.

Many young men and women "whom the army has taught to drink" already are "turning to alcohol at the first problem that confronts them—the readjustment to civilian life," Mrs. Colvin said.

Clark told the committee the chamber of commerce's stand was based on a referendum conducted late last year among more than 2,000 organization members representing 750,000 large and small business men, professional men, and industrialists.

Advocating one continuous year of training, Clark said he did not believe the proposed plan of four summer periods of three months each would be workable.

U. S. PREPARING SHANGHAI WAR CRIMINAL TRIAL

SHANGHAI, Nov. 28 (AP)—A staff of 20 United States officers is preparing for prosecution by mid-December of 50 alleged war criminals in custody in Shanghai. Col. Edward H. Young, Washington, D. C., judge advocate, said today Baltimore, Md., accused of propagandizing for the Japanese during that the 50 included Don Chisholm, their occupation of Shanghai. An American citizen, he may be returned to the United States for trial.

Thirty-five Japanese are charged with participation in the torture parade and cremation of three United States flyers at Hankow last December.

More arrests are expected. There are no war criminal suspects of cabinet rank held here, Col. Young said, explaining that the prisoners for the most part will be tried for "their own inhuman acts," including atrocities against American captives.

CITY EMPLOYES' WAGE DEMANDS ARE ANALYZED

Pay increases in 1946 for the majority of the city's 15,000 employes were said by aldermen yesterday to be unlikely but not impossible while a subcommittee on raises, headed by Ald. Lindell [9th], continued to hear demands from employe groups.

Increases for white collar workers and others who are not members of labor unions, if granted on the approximate percentage basis of those to be given members of building trades unions, would mean an addition of $2,250,000 to the 1946 budget.

Meeting increased scales for union employes is expected to cost $1,250,000. This figure, Lindell said, does not include a total raise of nearly $375,000 to be granted to Municipal court bailiffs and clerks and a $1,800,000 appropriation to be set up for salaries for returning police and firemen released from the army and navy.

Mrs. Florence Freifelder, Waukegan—Whenever I shorten the children's slacks, dresses, or pajamas, I save the cutoff pieces. They come in handy later for patching.

Esther W., Chicago—A little common granulated rock salt placed on a bright furnace fire occasionally is a help in getting rid of soot. But remember to play safe when burning out a flue and do it only on a damp or rainy day when the roof is wet.

Mrs. Ed. A., Milwaukee, Wis.—When I have to remove a smooth-surface screw cap from a bottle, and it proves stubborn, I wrap a piece of ordinary adhesive tape around it. This gives a good grip for unscrewing the cap.

Over 2 Million Is Still Needed for Fund Drive

Despite the fact that other cities in the country are lagging behind Chicago in the Community and War Fund Victory campaign, only 82 per cent, or $10,646,050, has been raised toward its goal of $13,040,700, it was disclosed yesterday at a final report meeting in the Standard club. Contributions, however, will continue to be solicited until Dec. 17 when a final dinner will be held in the Palmer House, Walter P. Paepcke, general chairman, said.

Paepcke pointed out that this was one of the most difficult campaigns "because of reconversion, strikes, and lethargy after the war effort had run its course." He said Chicago is leading other cities of the nation in the drive but maintained that this should not lessen the effort to complete the over all quota.

Two hundred twenty-eight representatives of 95,000 volunteer workers thruout Cook, Lake, and Du Page counties were present at the meeting to hear the reports and meet four Chicago heroes, Sgt. Robert Gerstung, of 5447 Northwest hwy., congressional medal of honor winner; Sgt. Raymond Gallagher of 5727 S. Mozart av.; Sgt. Albert Barsumian of 3140 Central st., Evanston, and Sgt. Jack Bivans of 2209 Rosemont av. The latter three took part in the atomic raids on Japan.

The women's special gifts division, headed by Mrs. Otto Madlener and Mrs. Philip D. Block Jr., reported the highest percentage toward their goal of any division in the drive. They have raised $318,149 or 97 per cent of a $330,000 goal.

The business division, which was assigned the task of soliciting 5,200 larger business firms, reported $9,099,485 or 89 per cent of its $10,200,000 goal. William J. Kelly, chairman of the division who presided at the meeting, was hopeful that the quota would be met by Dec. 17.

James R. Sterling, chairman of the city division, had at its latest audit $665,908 or 67 per cent of a million dollar goal. The city division is soliciting more than 90,000 smaller business firms and 600,000 homes thruout the city.

The suburban division, which seeks to raise funds for war related relief in 184 outlying towns, reported $610,267 or 72 per cent of its $850,000 quota. The division is headed by Stuart W. Cochran. Twenty-three per cent of its $660,700 goal, or $153,879, was reported by the miscellaneous division headed by Howard Nuckman.

Two hundred thousand dollars in Victory bonds were purchased yesterday at a rally in South Chicago where Hitler's flashy Mercedes-Benz convertible was exhibited here for the first time. The car also was viewed by 15,000 persons at the Victory bond platform at State and Adams sts. between noon and 3 p. m.

Names Do Not Alter Persons, Girl Advised

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

"My mother and father were not born in this country and they have some funny ideas. They named all of us names that were popular in their country, but I never have heard of any one in my school with the same name as mine. I feel self-conscious about this and have asked my parents to let me change my name but they have refused. I am considering adopting the name of my favorite movie star. Do you think it would be all right if I told my friends at school that this new name is my real name and start using it without my parents' permission?"

on the SOLID side

If you were named Ingrid, Bette, Lauren, or any other name, you still would be exactly the same person you are right now, with the same appearance and the same personality—so why change it? "A rose by any other name," you know. Most parents give a child a certain name because it means something important to them, and when you get a bit older it undoubtedly will seem equally important to you.

"A few days ago one of the girls in my class asked me to go to a girls' club dance with her two weeks from now. She asked me while I was with a crowd of fellows outside school, and we didn't have a chance to talk about it much. That night I called her up to ask her when she wanted me to pick her up, if she wanted to double date and to make other plans for the evening, and she told me she couldn't talk to me because her family was just going to have dinner. But I think she has changed her mind about wanting me to go with her. . . ."

Of course, the gal didn't change her mind! She asked you to go to the dance with her and she meant it, but there are times when social life and family affairs just don't mix and one of those times is when the dinner is hot and steaming on the table! Many families have hard and fast rules about having meals on time and with all members present. Why not call the gal again at a more convenient hour? Most families have finished their coffee and cakes by 7!

Discontented Child Often Is Overindulged

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"Why is my child hard to please, discontented, aimless?"

Barring ill health, low vitality, or convalescence, all of which may show themselves in this kind of fussiness and malcontent, there are two usual reasons for this kind of temperament. One is too much attention, and the other too many playthings.

Let us take first the matter of too much attention. You often will find, where grandparents or other relatives live with their children, too much of this loving adoration. It may take the form of spoiling, too large doses of approval, or merely of constant attention.

The child's natural tendency to be self-sufficient or self-entertaining, within certain limits of course, is thwarted, and the undue stimulation that comes from too much attention makes playing alone seem uninteresting and results in a child who is no longer contented.

We don't want the relatives to shoulder all this blame. Many mothers and fathers, too, make the same mistake of not letting their children alone enough, of not letting them cultivate the ability to be by themselves happily.

Another phase of this "hard to please" child is the short-lived interest in the toys that he has. He likes them for a short time, then gets bored and refuses to play with them, demanding something new. Often this boredom results from too many toys. Instead of exhausting the possibilities of a few well chosen or stimulating toys, he is confronted with a plethora of playthings. And if there is one thing that is worse than having too little, it is having too much. The discontented child, the too fussy child, the overindulged child, the dissatisfied, too-critical child often is the one deluged with attention and toys.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 no trump	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of diamonds.

At the card table, as elsewhere, the time for courage is when the outlook is dark. But when a hand appears to be a cinch, that is the point at which to take time out for a moment of pessimistic reflection.

It must have been a divine inspiration that induced North to take no further action over his partner's four spade response. He argued that he had shown the full strength of his hand by the opening bid of three no trump and that since partner was unable to bid five spades, he did not choose to risk a slam contract. On the other hand, it will be observed that if South holds so little as five spades to the king-queen, there is a splendid play for the slam. In view of South's delivery, no fault can be found with North's judgment.

The queen of diamonds was opened and taken by the king. There was nothing to it but getting out the trumps, so South promptly fired the ace of spades on the table. When East showed void of the suit, there was no way to avoid the loss of three trump tricks and the ace of hearts. When a contract appears to be as ironclad as this one, the proper procedure is for declarer to take a moment to inquire "What accident could possibly befall me?" The answer would be, "Only four trumps in one hand." But if they are in the East hand the contract is secure. If, however, they happen to be in the West hand caution must be exercised.

The winning play is a low spade away from the ace. When East fails, the six is played and West wins with the ten. The jack of diamonds will be continued, and further care is required. Declarer must not run out of trumps too soon, before all his work is done. At this time the king of hearts must be led to establish a trick in that suit. West will win and presumably return a club. Declarer ruffs himself in with a diamond and leads a spade. The jack forces the ace and dummy's last spade is led. West wins and declarer has two high trumps left. Nothing can prevent him from ruffing himself in to draw the last trump to cash all the high tricks.

Nancy Cochran Will Be Bride Tomorrow of E. A. Cudahy III.

BY JUDITH CASS

ALTHO Saturdays traditionally are the most popular days for weddings, Chicago has two ceremonies of particular interest which are planned for Fridays. One will take place at 4 p. m. tomorrow in Old St. Mary's church, where Edward A. Cudahy III. will claim Miss Nancy Cochran as his bride, and the other will take place Friday of next week, when Miss Mary Elizabeth Bennett will be married to Lt. [j. g.] Philip Field Wythe Peck Jr. of the naval reserve.

The small reception in the Casino club which will follow the Cudahy-Cochran wedding will be in the nature of a farewell to the young bride and her bridegroom, for after a wedding trip to Phoenix, Ariz., they will go to La Jolla, Cal., to live, while Mr. Cudahy is in business in nearby San Diego. Miss Cochran's mother, Mrs. Cudahy Jr., is president of the Casino club.

Miss Cochran will be attended by her sister, Mrs. Louis Lee Hemingway Jr. of Portland, Ore., as matron of honor. Miss Elizabeth Peabody will be maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. Arthur D. Fulton Jr. [Blissie King], Mrs. Gordon Lyle [Helen Niblack], Miss Diana Hill, and Miss Jean Scharin.

The bridegroom's father, Mr. Cudahy Jr., will be best man, and ushering will be the bridegroom's brother, Anthony B. Cudahy; their brother-in-law, Giorgio Pellegrini; Lt. Hemingway, Howard Peabody Jr., William C. Douglas, Michael Reddy, and Albert Brace Pattou Jr. The Rev. Donald Temple will read the service. Miss Cochran will be given in marriage by her father, John L. Cochran.

Other Wedding News

James Ewing Bennett has issued invitations to the marriage of his daughter, who always is called Betty, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Peck of Lake Forest at 4:30 p. m. Friday of next week in St. Chrysostom's church and to a reception following in his Wellington av. residence. Miss Ruth Ann Bennett, the bride's next younger sister, will be maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be their younger twin sisters, Joan and Janet, who are debutantes this year; Mrs. Walter J. Taylor, and Miss Barbara McClurg.

Miss Bennett's older sister, Mrs. Thomas B. Satterwhite, is expected Monday from Washington, D. C., where she and Lt. Satterwhite, who is awaiting his discharge from the navy, have been living. Serving as best man will be the bridegroom's brother, Stewart T. Peck, who is on terminal leave from the army. Ushers will include Henry P. Wheeler and Maj. Elliott Detchon, both on terminal leave from the marine corps; Lt. Hugh Virgil Sherill of New York, who just has been discharged from the navy; Lt. Charles W. Bent, now out of the army; Lt. John Leggett and Walter Herrick of New York, Albert B. Dick III., and Lt. Richard Gould of the navy.

The Detchons and Mrs. Joseph N. Greene Jr. will entertain at luncheon for Miss Bennett and Lt. Peck next Wednesday in the Lake Forest home of Mrs. Greene's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Knight C. Cowles. Mrs. Clarence C. Prentice will give a cocktail party Wednesday afternoon, and Lt. Peck's bachelor dinner will be held that night in the Onwentsia club. Miss McClurg will entertain at cocktails Thursday before the bridal dinner, which Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller, godparents of the bride, will give in the Racquet club. Mr. and Mrs. Peck will give a luncheon Friday in the Casino for the

Clubwomen's Aid in Housing Vets Pledged

BY IRENE STEYSKAL
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28—Active help of the 2½ million members of the General Federation of Women's clubs in solving the housing problem for the returned veteran and his family was asked by Mrs. Lafell Dickinson, G. F. W. C. president, in her official report tonight to federation leaders, gathered here from all parts of the country for their midyear board of directors meeting and a "youth conservation" conference. The meeting, to continue thru Saturday, is being held in the Statler hotel.

Mrs. Dickinson said she recently had called on Gen. Bradley to offer the services of the federation to the veterans' administration. "The first thing Gen. Bradley asked our help in was housing," she reported. "Could we help the returned service man and his family find a place to live? I said we could."

This administration of the federation is especially pledged to the service of youth, and all sessions of the board on Friday are to be given to a youth conservation institute. Mrs. Dickinson asked in her report that the pattern already set in that field by the club leaders now be translated in wholesome recreational and organizational projects in the community "back home," particularly for underprivileged groups. She asked for the development also of a parallel parental guidance program, for, she said, "I believe youth guidance is futile in many instances without parental guidance."

Mrs. Dickinson asked that in the January victory clothing collection for overseas relief clubwomen assume chairmanships to a greater extent than in the earlier drive.

She had sent a message "as strong as I could make it," she reported, to the foreign affairs committee of the house asking for the "immediate" appropriation of funds for the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration. "Certainly UNRRA has made mistakes," she commented, "but if we were to wait for a perfectly operated agency, no group would ever be helped. Human beings go without while we argue over a sum of money that is paltry in comparison with funds spent for war."

Noting that the club federation had gone on record for an international organization, she called for "continued intelligent support" of efforts in that direction. But, "meanwhile we are going to need, in fact we shall probably always need, in order to maintain the peace, a strong reserve of military trained personnel in this country," she warned. She had spoken before the military affairs committee, not for the organization but as an individual, Mrs. Dickinson said, "in behalf of a universal military training law."

Bath aids for the teen-ager to wait for the applause that surely will come.

Consider, among other things, a sweet vanity box [she'll love it for her dresser or dressing table] of three compartments, into each of which, snuggled on shiny cellophane streamers, are tucked exactly the kind of bath aids the young girl loves. There are bath powder with a fat puff; toilet water, soap, bath salts, and sachet, all in the same clean, blithe fragrance of spice.

This, we feel, is an appropriate gift for the teen ager. The scent is just her style—not too sophisticated—and the packages have all the prettiness and daintiness that appeal to the wide eyed, with a design and color as early American as the Williamsburg restoration. What's more, the products are of excellent quality and variety for the girl just learning the fine feminine art of bathing for beauty as well as for cleanliness.

The whole pretty vanity box costs $5, plus the inevitable tax.

Extremely sophisticated dinner dresses invariably cling to the figure lines. Clinging materials therefore are the most effective mediums with which to stress any stream line. And, of course, the dark colors and black, by the very magic of the dark shade, remove inches and smooth away incipient bulges. Light colors and pastels, made in these floor touching lengths, also manage the same magic, because of the flawless fitting and the long slender lines.

Jersey and crepe are two fabrics that make stunning costumes as they both can be draped and swathed with infinite grace and fluidity, especially the jersey. Most of such dresses are spartan plain, depending upon exquisite seaming and detail to make the very most of every inch of the material. Such dresses become the dramatic background for precious jewelry and the many new exciting pieces of costume jewelry—huge pins, clips, spray brooches, big, chunky chokers and necklaces, and dozens of musically jingling bracelets, as well as the bigger earrings, and the long dangling earrings which have been revived during the past two weeks for high fashion consideration.

Timed for the holiday dinner parties scheduled during the next 30 days, are the delectable new dinner dresses of shimmering metallics. The fabrics are exceptionally beautiful in such colors as red, gold, green, and white interwoven with glinting silver and gold threads. Because of the splendor of the metallics the dresses are most simply designed. Fake jewel buttons in large oblongs fasten the dress from neck to hem.

Movie's Story of Life in South Told with Skill

"THE SOUTHERNER"

By Mae Tinée

Unlike that official in Memphis, Tenn., I liked "The Southerner" and felt that, rather than being a reflection on the southern farmer, it can evoke only admiration for men who love the soil enough to struggle with and for it as did Sam Tucker.

He and his wife, Nona, are poor migratory workers and feel that working as tenant farmers may improve their lot. They start with nothing except their strong wills and hands, a good piece of land, and a miserable shack. Theirs is a grinding poverty, with hunger a constant threat, and their only neighbor, on whom they must depend for water, could easily qualify as the meanest man in the world. Like many such people, they have a philosophy and religious feeling peculiarly their own, which may seem as strange as their way of life to city dwellers but is quietly satisfying to them.

The young couple and their two children [attractive youngsters played by Jay Gilpin and Jean Vanderwilt] endure much hardship and many heartbreaking setbacks, and old Granny, forcefully played by Beulah Bondi, is an additional irritation. She contributes much to the film and is a childish, cantankerous, but fierce old warrior. Zachary Scott is most likable as the quiet, persistent young farmer, and Betty Field does good work as his attractive young wife. This young couple will gain your sympathy and definitely hold your interest thruout the film.

"The Southerner" was adapted from a prize winning novel by George Sessions Perry, and it seems too bad that the original title, "Hold Autumn in Your Hand," was changed to the present unremarkable label.

There were some incidents which seemed unnecessary and rather out of tune—the romance of the farmer's mother and the storekeeper, for instance—and it seemed strange to me that two men bent on killing each other would lose interest in the battle because of the capture of an unusually large fish, but perhaps I just don't appreciate fishing.

On the whole, however, the film is skilfully directed and the acting well above average, and it provides an intelligent and realistic sketch of one part of our population.

Estelle Taylor makes a brief appearance as a feminine barfly, and she certainly wields a mean beer bottle in a fight!

Program of Jewish Music Well Planned and Ably Presented

Susie Michael, pianist-narrator, and Maurice Friedman, baritone-mime, were the protagonists in a "Calvacade of Jewish Music," presented before a large and approving audience in Kimball hall last night.

Obviously much careful study and thought went into the planning and preparation of a program which differed appreciably from the often haphazard character of such events. Miss Michael not only functioned as a skillful accompanist but offered illuminating comment on the various examples of Jewish music presented: That of the synagogs, that reflecting life in present day Palestine, Yiddish art songs, folk and Chassidic songs.

Mr. Friedman proved himself not only an adept interpreter of such music, but the possessor of a warm and rich baritone voice which he employs to such worthy musical ends that it would be interesting to hear him in music of more demanding character. He was particularly effective in his singing of excerpts from the synagog ritual, which he delivered minus the exaggeration and excess of feeling which often diminish the value of such music on the concert platform. He appeared an equally able interpreter of other types of Jewish song, and while one must always retain certain reservations regarding the propriety of mimicry and pantomime on the recital stage, Mr. Friedman at least made it seem in character.

ON THE RECORD

By Claudia Cassidy

Wanda Landowska's "Goldberg Variations" Heads List of Newest Record Treasures

There are times when the record companies resemble benefactors of mankind, and today I feel benign about Victor. That is because a packing box popped open to disclose treasure to put alongside the "Art of Fugue" and "The Musical Offering" on the best Bach shelf. It is Wanda Landowska's harpsichord performance of the Goldberg Variations [M-1022; six 12 inch records], hitherto available, if at all, only in an imported recording guarded by connoisseurs at the muzzle of a blunderbuss. The new set was recorded this year, and it can be consolation for the sad fact that Mme. Landowska's health rarely permits her to journey outside New York for concerts.

To say that this passionate perfectionist is the greatest living harpsichordist is to speak with restraint. This tiny Polish woman, 68 years old now, with a birdlike beak and flowing skirts to hide slipperless feet encased in woolen socks that won't slip from the pedals, is a legend in her own time. Her playing has a lucid brilliance almost incomparably exhilarating in music. It reminds you that Bach wrote his aria and 30 variations not so much to put the insomniac Count Kaiserling to sleep as to beguile his wakefulness with soft and lively music, which is why the title page reads "Composed for music lovers, to refresh their spirits."

For such music, recordings should be satin smooth, and it isn't, not quite. But the album comes under the head of irresistible loot, with Landowska's own notes on the score, surrounded by many pictures of her hands at work, and prefaced by one of Virgil Thomson's eloquent tributes to a unique artist.

Prokofieff: "Alexander Nevsky," performed by the Philadelphia orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, and the Westminster choir [Columbia M-580; five 12 inch records]. This is the cantata arranged by Prokofieff from his score for the famous Eisenstein film, and it sounds like propaganda music written to order. It tells the story of the invasion of Russia by Teutonic fanatics disguised as crusaders [a sardonic touch of Gregorian chant here], their defeat in the crunching battle of the ice, a wail of grief for the dead, and the jubilant ringing of victorious Russian bells. It is sung in Latin and English, but the texts are printed in the album in case you get lost.

Respighi: "The Birds," played by the Chicago Symphony orchestra under the direction of Désiré Defauw [Victor paper backed Showpiece 14; two 12 inch records]. The secret of this engaging suite for small orchestra is witty elegance in performance, which the recording has not captured. But it has a flourish of strings and some engaging interludes for woodwind, tho the celesta sometimes sounds like a xylophone and the murmurous nightingale seems to have caught cold in a miasmic swamp.

Bizet: Music from "Cármen," arranged and conducted by Leopold Stokowski with the New York City Symphony orchestra [Victor M-1002; four 12 inch records]. Mr. Stokowski has arranged a dozen of the favorite "Carmen" episodes to suit himself, but what the album really proves is that no man beats him when it comes to putting a new orchestra together.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 28—Jack Warner was so pleased with the results of co-starring Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson in "The Time, the Place and the Girl" that he's putting them together again in "Howdy Stranger." You guessed it—it'll be a western with music. . . . When he was in Hollywood, Air Marshal Arthur Tedder visited Walt Disney and suggested that he do for England what he did for Latin America in "Three Caballeros" by letting Donald Duck, or some other of his creations, come over and do the rounds in Britain. Not a bad idea. Besides being extremely successful at the Latin American boxoffice, "Caballeros" created much good will, and, heaven knows, the old world could stand for more of that item today. And the English countryside, fantastically beautiful in reality, would make wonderful material for the Disney imagination to transmute. . . . Speaking of cartoons, George Pal has started his latest which will feature Louis Armstrong, his orchestra, and the little puppetoon pickaninny, "Jasper."

He's Out of Character

Tho Albert Dekker has been elected to the California state assembly, he still can't get away from character roles. Now he's been given the baddie part in "California" and will have to do such an unstatesmanlike thing as pounding Ray Milland on the noggin with a whisky bottle. Incidentally, he says he's not giving up pictures for a political career. . . . When Van Johnson proved to be the only one of 200 invited guests failing to show up at Esther Williams' wedding, she called to ask, "How come?" Van said, "I didn't get an invitation." Most likely he'll find it some day lost in his fan mail.

Quick Shave—And a Close One

Piné and Thomas, noted for giving friends parts in their pictures, put Bobo Scharf, their barber, in "Swamp Fire." When Bobo reported for work, he left a sign on his barbershop door: "Doing featured role in Pine and Thomas picture. Be back in 15 minutes." . . . Darling I am growing old department: Bonita Granville, whom we still associate with youth and innocence, has had a flock of stills on her new picture nixed by the Johnston office. They were too sexy. . . . After the preview of "Lost Weekend," I overheard a lot of people criticizing its ending. The transformation in the alcoholic's character was too abrupt and unconvincing. That, according to its producers, was the effect wished. As the author of the book stated, the man could be saved, but he'd have to save himself. And no one, not even the character himself, knew whether he'd be able to stay on the wagon. That's another story.

Good Job by Our Entertainers

From Korea comes a letter written by ex-Hollywoodite Staff Sgt. Dan McNeil, singing the praises of our entertainers sent over. Said he: "Danny Kaye's show here was so completely without smut or degenerated humor, yet so warm, full of feeling, and good fun, we were grateful for his compliment to our intelligence. Joe E. Brown flew in to entertain us on a guerrilla-held strip in Luzon, and despite our warnings of danger, insisted on visiting and shaking hands with every member of a polio ridden ward—fellows lying there with pains medicine couldn't touch, and who in a few hours might be either paralyzed or dead." Of the "Oklahoma!" troupe, Sgt. McNeil said: "They didn't come over here to be nice to the common GI."

"With Bated Breath" . . . . By Alice Campbell

(Copyright: 1945: By Mrs. Alice Ormond Campbell)

INSTALMENT XXII.

MOTIVE: ROBBERY?

Tactfully Avis admired the beautiful old garnets Erica was now wearing. What a dream of a necklace! Might she see it? Fatal words! Instantly, with lightning eagerness, Erica snatched the gorgeous ornament from her throat.

"You like it? Take it. It's yours!"

"Me take your necklace? O, no," Avis recoiled, horrified.

"Why ever not?" Miss Erica looked about to cry. "I want you to have it. Of course you will take it, to keep remembrance of me."

She had to take the necklace. She couldn't give this generous-hearted little creature pain. She would watch her chance to put the garnets back.

Ethel tapped on Avis' door. Avis stuffed the strands of cabochon garnets down inside the neck of her thick turquoise-blue jumper.

"A—it's a pleeceman, Miss," Ethel whispered affrightedly. "I hope I've done right, I've put him in the lounge. He—he says he'll wait for Miss Bolles, but he'll want to see you, too."

At this same moment Maud's gruff tones floated up from below.

Robin also had come in, but neither Olive nor Moravian were present when Avis came unsteadily down the stair to find Inspector Crewhurst twisting his braided cap and Maud glaring at him. The bomb already had been dropped.

"What?" Maud cried, and for a few seconds drew in her breath thru pinched nostrils. "Our tunnel!" she muttered.

She then asked a blunt question. The inspector seemed embarrassed.

"Suicide, Miss Bolles?" he repeated. "Well, no, I'm afraid we can't see that as a solution. I'm sorry to have to inform you that while the victim was shot, we've not been able to lay hands on the weapon. It's a bit of a puzzle, in a way, seeing as I've just said some of her clothes were taken out of the little pond over at Elm Corners."

"Elm Corners! Then why"—with asperity—"come to me?"

The inspector was now dripping with tact and apology. "Well, Miss Maud, at the opening I may tell you it looks like robbery with violence. Meaning to say there's not a sign of her purse. Robbery," Crewhurst repeated. "But then, it's by no means sure. I'm in duty bound, therefore, to ask you, Miss, if to your knowledge Miss Trimble had—er—any ill-wishers?"

"Not to my knowledge." The answer held a distinct reservation. The inspector waited hopefully, then let his troubled eyes rest on Avis. "I didn't really need to question you, Miss," he said. "I was forgetting you as a newcomer to these parts weren't likely to be acquainted with the victim." To Maud he added that in a measure the same would apply to the remaining two guests now resident at Turrets, tho as a matter of fact he had met both of them in Wyfforde and put the routine queries. "We needn't bother Miss Erica, I think?"

"My sister? On the contrary," Maud said with decision, "we must try our utmost to keep this shocking news from her. Is that all?"

When Avis returned from showing the inspector out, both occupants of the lounge stood silent.

"Robbery!" Maud withered. "What could have been stolen?"

"Money," Robin blurted. His godmother faced him with an unbelieving frown. "O, yes," he muttered, scarlet. "No business of mine, but I was close by her the time she dropped her infernal bulging purse—right on this hearth. It spilled a roll of banknotes as big as my arm."

Slowly, bitterly, Maud gave a nod. "I see." With a shrug of her gaunt shoulders she took up her Red Cross collection box from the telephone stand and bore it to her room.

Robin said "Whew!" He stuck a cigaret between his teeth. Overcasual, Avis felt, and again not meeting her eyes. "Robin," she whispered, "did you really see all that money fall out of poor Miss Trimble's bag?"

"Did I not! I've said so, haven't I? One pound notes, fit to choke a donkey. Clipped with a rubber band."

Something told her he had made this tale up on the spur of the moment. She thought she knew why.

He left her, striding out of the front door.

Behind the baize door something soft thudded. Avis turned round the high mantelpiece to investigate. The service door yielded an inch, but no more. She pushed, the obstruction moved. "O," she gasped, and bent down. The shadowed form was Miss Erica, prone across the landing of the back stair!

Erica had been listening.

"Miss Erica! O, Miss Erica!" A seizure or a faint? Avis seized the pulseless wrist, found it snatched from her. Oscar Moravian had come leaping up the basement steps. "Quick," he ordered, "call the doctor! Is she injured?

His dark complexion was green with terror. She explained her idea of what had happened, making sure there were no broken bones. Between them they lifted the light burden and carried it thru to the study sofa.

Maud, of course, would have to be informed, so the minute the telephoning was done Avis rushed up and flung wide the bedroom door. "Miss Erica's fainted," she began, and backed a step.

Miss Bolles had whipped round from some stooping occupation with an armchair. She was attempting to conceal the chair-seat behind her. Avis had a clear view of a dislodged cushion and underneath, exposed on the webbing, a thick roll of treasury notes, clamped round with a rubber band.

In one instant a horrible map unrolled. The thing she had never quite been able to believe hit her a numbing blow.

"Miss Erica," she stammered, and realized that Robin was hard on her heels. "What's wrong with Erica?" he demanded, only the name missed its final syllable, for he, too, had seen. "Smelling salts," she gasped, tearing past him to the top floor. His face was flamingo. So his story had been true.

Money — good money Maud's miserly instincts hadn't permitted her to burn. Pound notes, untraceable, which for some reason hadn't been banked — and could not be banked Now. Sixty to eighty pounds at a guess, clamped together by a rubber band, exactly as Robin had declared. And he, poor fool, had publicized them not 10 minutes before! It was a crowning irony, but that didn't occupy her now. Her head was bursting with its load of dreadful knowledge which she'd simply got to keep to herself till she could see Cam. For Maud must know she had seen, and if Maud had shot Agatha Trimble then Maud still had a weapon.

Miss Cochran's Wedding Will Be Tomorrow

Here and There

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hamm Jr. [Joy Fairman] became the parents of a daughter, their third child, Nov. 24 in the Evanston hospital. The baby has been named Martha Joy, after her aunt, Mrs. Rush Butler Jr., and her mother. The baby and her sister and brother, Julie and Thornton, are grandchildren of Mrs. Hamm and of the Fred Wilson Fairmans.

Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter are in New York to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Maj. and Mrs. Robert S. Pirie, and to attend the premiere of Mr. Carpenter's newest composition today in Carnegie hall. The symphony, which uses as its theme the seven stages of life portrayed by Shakespeare in "As You Like It," will be played by the New York Philharmonic orchestra under the baton of Artur Rodzinski. It also will be played tomorrow and Saturday and again on Sunday, when it will be broadcast.

On the Calendar

At the fall meeting of the Chicago Junior league at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the Woman's Athletic club, members will be congratulating themselves on having raised $9,000 at the league's Thanksgiving eve benefit ball. Hostesses at tomorrow's meeting, which will be followed by luncheon, are Mrs. Herbert C. De Young, Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams III., Mrs. George H. Willis, Mrs. Henry Paulman, Mrs. William O. Hunt, and Mrs. Robert Walker. The speaker will be John Groth, artist reporter, just returned from Europe, who will illustrate his talk on "Present Conditions in Europe" with his portraits of celebrities.

The Woman's Exchange in N. Michigan av. will be crowded with Christmas shoppers today, tomorrow, and Saturday, at the shop's Christmas open house. Luncheon will not be served, as the tea rooms will be needed to display the beautiful gifts directors of the Exchange have gathered for the occasion. Toys, doll houses, peasant cottages, linens, bags, pillows, old prints, and other items will be available.

Other Events

The Casino club will be ablaze with lights tonight for a dinner American Relief for France and France Forever will give for Henri Edouard Bonnet, French ambassador to the United States, and Mme. Bonnet. The Bonnets will be guests at cocktail time of French Consul Jean J. Viala in the Arts club, where they will meet heads of French societies in Chicago.

Ambassador Bonnet, who will speak at the dinner, will be the special guest at a luncheon today in the Chicago club, arranged by a committee of well known Chicagoans, headed by Robert Hall McCormick, formerly president of the Alliance Francaise and head of the Chicago group of France-America. Tomorrow M. Bonnet will address a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations in the Palmer House.

Romantic News

In a quiet ceremony last Saturday in the Oak Park home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chapin Roberts, Miss Carolyn Roberts became the bride of Frank E. Kennett Jr. Mr. Kennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kennett of Conway, N. H., will leave this week-end for Fort Bragg, N. C., to receive his discharge from the army following duty in Europe with the air borne infantry. As soon as he returns here as a civilian he will take his bride to Arizona, where they will live temporarily until he resumes his studies in March at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a graduate of Phillips Exeter academy. The former Miss Roberts attended Swarthmore college and received her degree from the National College of Education.

Announcement is being made by Mrs. Baily Mohlman of New York and George A. Mohlman of Suffield, Conn., of the engagement of their daughter, Betty Buford, to Earl Donald Bennett Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett of South Pasadena, Cal. Miss Mohlman, sister of Theodore Albert Mohlman of Hinsdale, has served as a Red Cross staff assistant in India for two years. She attended Miss Beards' school. Her fiance is an alumnus of the University of California. Their marriage will take place in December.

THE QUESTION

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Billy Lyons, Buffalo, N. Y.—I consider my greatest virtue is my disregard for money. It makes no difference to me whether I spend money or save it. I don't care if I'm never wealthy. If my children have food and learn to appreciate the finer things in life, that's all that matters.

Joanee Lemke, Milwaukee—My sense of humor and ability to smile thru anything is encouraging to other persons and to myself. It's rather embarrassing talking about one's own virtues but I think if it weren't for smiling and looking at the brighter side I would be unnecessarily unhappy.

Sidney Harnesk, 822 Cuyler av.—My best virtue is my love for my mother. I want her to have everything that she deserves. I always write to her wherever I go and send her souvenirs from each city I visit. I appreciate what my parents have done for me and I know I can never repay them.

Midge Brasuhn, St. Paul—I don't like to see any one punished for a mistake they have made and if I can help any one who is in a jam I'm always willing to do so. People who are in trouble always feel lost and sometimes a few words of encouragement is all they need.

Jack Wilson, Chattanooga, Tenn.—An emergency never excites me. I go thru life each day taking things as they come. It's what you might call taking life easy. Each minute passes and there's never anything that warrants too much heartache or mental disturbance. I don't worry.

Bobbie Johnstone, San Francisco—The constant love I have for my husband and the way I conduct myself is the virtue of which I am proud. He's been gone for over a year and the lapse of time doesn't change the way I feel about him. I write him faithfully and wouldn't consider going out with other men.

Jewish Observance of Chanukah Starts at Sundown Today

Chanukah, the Jewish feast commemorating the dedication of the temple, will open at sundown today to continue thru Dec. 7. It will be celebrated in all synagogs by the lighting of candles—hence the title, Feasts of Lights. Candles also will be placed in the windows of many homes.

Rabbi Elias Gamze, spiritual leader of the Loop orthodox synagog, 16 S. Clark st., will light the first candle at 4:30 p. m. today, and one more will be lighted each day until the ritual number of eight candles is reached. Also at 8 p. m., and for eight days thereafter, Dr. Gamze will read a chapter from the Torah, which for this feast is taken from the Book of Numbers, dealing with the dedication [Chanukah] of the temple.

Children participate largely in the home aspect of the festival. Gifts are given to them, and the poor are remembered to remind children of the duty of charity.

Soup for Lunch

Ever notice how sharp the appetites of your school youngsters are at noon? Fill their tummies but remember to keep the meal well-balanced. An easy way to get plenty of vegetables eaten is to serve a delicious cream soup literally filled with vegetables.

Cream of Vegetable Soup . . . nourishing and satisfying

To 2 cups boiling water
Add 1½ cups diced potatoes
1 cup sliced onion
½ cup sliced celery
½ cup diced carrot
¼ cup tomatoes
2 cups coarsely shredded cabbage

Add 2 cups rich milk
2 tbsp. CERTIFIED MARGARINE
2 tsp. WILSON'S B-V dissolved in the hot liquid.
Serves 6.

Clip Recipe Here

Cream Soup Simplifies Lunch

Cream of vegetable soup, brimming with a variety of vegetables, is a hearty, nutritious soup. Add a tart kidney bean salad, gingerbread with mixed fruit topping plus a beverage to complete the meal.

Meat flavor adds deliciousness to cream soups. A little B-V dissolved in the hot soup does the trick. Save steps to and from the kitchen by serving the soup from a tureen. Keeps the soup hot; handy for a second helpings.

Busy Day Finds

The vegetables for the vegetable cream soup may be cooked the day before. Reheat the last minute along with the milk and B-V. The kidney bean salad is one of the few salads that is really better if made the day before. Prepared gingerbread mix and canned fruit cocktail, drained and chilled, for the topping, save valuable minutes, too.

Did You Know That?

You can add eye and flavor appeal to creamed soups with pimiento strips; diced, crisp Certified Bacon; grated Certified American Cheese; croutons (squares of day-old bread, toasted)?

Yours for tastier soups,
George Rector

BOWLING STARS GATHER FOR NATIONAL MEET

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

THE major league baseball meetings in Chicago Dec. 10, 11, and 12 will need no formal agenda. . . . The sole business will be to try to swap or buy the St. Louis Cardinals' overflow of stars. . . . Bert McGrane of Des Moines, secretary of the Football Writers' Association of America, was a leading candidate for the association's annual "Man of the Year" award, because of the suffering he went thru covering his beloved Iowa Hawkeyes in their games prior to Nov. 17. . . . But Bert lost his sympathetic support the day Iowa beat Minnesota, 20 to 19. . . . His elation over that triumph all but disqualified him. . . . Incidentally, how about a hand for "Dad" Schroeder and the Iowa football staff who kept the game alive thru the war, altho it was almost a foregone conclusion their team would take a sound licking Saturday after Saturday. . . . Some universities with more material threw in the towel. . . . If John Barnhill of Tennessee turns up as Kentucky's 1946 gridiron coach, remember we told you. . . . Joe Posner, widely known sports figure since the days when he was a 97 pound jockey 57 years ago, has sold the Chicago Stadium grill, but he has been lending a hand in the place on hockey and fight nights. . . . The next meeting of the All-America Football conference probably will be held in San Francisco in January, altho Commissioner Jim Crowley has issued no formal call.

Tony Minisi, who wasn't on the first string for the Navy until after his glittering performance against Notre Dame, now is being prominently mentioned by selectors of All-America backs. . . . Sports writers who were told about all those elevators which were about to be constructed to Alpine press boxes in football stadia and baseball parks, except for the freeze on materials, have heard no announcement now that freezes have thawed. . . . And it's not that they haven't been listening intently. . . . Next to Bishop Bernard J. Sheil of Chicago, Archbishop Joseph Rummel of New Orleans probably is the most enthusiastic sports fan among the Catholic hierarchy in the United States. . . . The night before the Notre Dame-Tulane game he attended a dinner for sports writers and officials given by Tulane and the following evening he spoke at a testimonial dinner for Fred Digby, sports editor of the New Orleans Item. . . . Chicago hockey fans who sometimes tune in on Montreal broadcasts in French, have inquired why they never see "that player Ronda," who seems to be the most active member of the Montreal team. . . . To such inquirers it is explained that "ronda" is French for puck. . . . Minnesota's athletic staff is beginning to resemble its pre-war lineup. . . . Bernie Bierman, first one back from service, has been followed by Frank McCormick, athletic director; Dallas Ward, football assistant; Dave Bartelma, wrestling coach, and Lloyd Boyce, assistant trainer. . . . Bert Baston, end coach prior to his induction into the army, and Bud Wilkinson, football assistant in 1941 and 1942, returned just before the Wisconsin game.

Attuned to God

Instruments must be Attuned to certain standard notes
That make for harmony,
Lest listeners be much annoyed
By cadences off key.

We, too, as various instruments,
Most precious in God's sight,
Must be attuned to Him thruout
Each hour, day and night;
Lest those who crave the sweet refrains
Of Christianity
Be much annoyed by act or word
That ruins harmony!

THEY'RE TOPS IN CITY LEAGUE FOOTBALL

Ralph McGeehee, Tilden — Bill Gay, Tilden — Mike Swistowicz, Tilden — Rocco Tarsitano, Austin — Len Aloy, Austin — Jim Fuchs, Hyde Park — Dick Redman, Schurz — John Miller, Schurz — Bob Nusser, Schurz — Bob Nowicki, Schurz — Phil Moio, Marshall — Gerald Kasley, Harper — Ray Rizzo, Lindblom — Bill Nydam, Fenger

Here are 14 players selected by coaches for places on The Tribune's All-City League football team. Balloting was so close for positions that extra selections were made. Schurz placed four stars on the team and Tilden three.

COACHES' TURN TO PLAY

It's a coaches night to relax, especially when the occasion is the pre-game party leading to Saturday's clash in Soldiers' field between Tilden Tech and Fenwick for the All-City title. Left to right: Chuck Harvey, Tilden coach; Jack Anderson, director of Saturday's charity all-city contest, and Tony Lawless, Fenwick coach, help festivities along in the Blackstone hotel last night. [TRIBUNE Photos]

Party, but No Host

Mayor Kelly, the host, couldn't be there due to difficulties created by the weatherman, but it was a great party, anyway. The occasion was the annual event held last night in the Blackstone hotel for City league and Catholic league football coaches, newspapermen and radio announcers, prior to Saturday's all-city prep charity title football game in Soldier's field.

For many years Mayor Kelly has been a principal figure in the annual get-together for the coaches. Last night the mayor was in New York, his return to Chicago from London by plane delayed until a snow front moved away from Chicago. The Chicago bound transcontinental passengers are expected to leave New York for home today.

Chief topic at last night's prep gathering, of course, was the title game Saturday. Tilden Tech will represent the City league against Fenwick, Catholic league co-champion with St. Ignatius. Tilden shares the City league crown with Schurz and Austin, but was selected to represent the public schools at a meeting of league officials. Fenwick won the right to play Tilden by the flip of a coin.

PARSHEY BEATS BOB GARNER ON SPLIT DECISION

Mack Parshey of Detroit, Mich., scored a third victory in four Chicago appearances by winning a 10 round split decision over Bob Garner of Louisville, Ky., before 810 in Ashland auditorium last night. There were no knockdowns, but the fight was a slugging match from start to finish, and a rematch is planned.

Referee Bernard Weisman and Judge John Bray voted for Parshey, and Judge Joe Schwarts voted the bout a draw. Gross receipts were $1,602.

RIVER FOREST TO GET CLAY MEET

Junior Net Cup Squads Will Be Revived

The River Forest Tennis club will be host to the 1946 national clay courts tournament, it was revealed yesterday at a luncheon meeting of officials of the Chicago Tennis association in the Merchandise Mart. The tennis officials met to discuss plans for next year and to formulate the post-war development program sponsored by the association.

The clay courts meet was brought back to the River Forest club last year, and the association yesterday reported the renewal was highly successful, both from an entry list and gate receipts viewpoint.

Plan Junior Cup Squads

Final plans also were made for the celebration of the association's 30th anniversary, Monday, Dec. 10, at the Saddle and Cycle club. At that annual dinner, 1946 tournament schedules, as well as 1945 rankings of players in the Chicago area, based on performances last season, will be announced.

Plan Increase in Clinics

The association's post-war development plan not only is centered on promoting the game thru tournaments and the junior cup squads but calls for increased clinics at various centers. This junior development program eventually may become the most important function of the association.

Attending the meeting were Warren Wheary, president; George E. Barnes, 1st vice president; John McElwain, 2d vice president and chairman of the junior development committee, and Directors K. J. Deimling and Ralph Ellis.

NAVY PREPARES TO STOP DAVIS

Scott, Minisi Detailed to Check Army Star

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 28 [Special] —Rain and a sloppy field proved no bar to a tapering off practice by the Navy football squad today as preparations went forward for the game with Army in Philadelphia's Municipal stadium Saturday. Heavy rains fell around mid-day and the precipitation continued lightly thru the rest of the afternoon.

Comdr. Oscar E. Hagberg, Navy coach, today said that because the potentially better team usually is slowed down more by a heavy field, continued rain would be to Navy's advantage Saturday. He said Bruce Smith, the Middies' passer, can throw a wet ball pretty well, and that to Clyde Scott and Tony Minisi had been delegated the duties of stopping the Cadets' Glenn Davis. Scott will go after Davis on Army's wide plays to the right, and Minisi when Davis goes the other way.

Back Field Lineup Announced

Speculation as to the final makeup of the back field combination was set at rest today. Definite announcement was made that Bob Jenkins, former standout and a great full back last year, not only will not start, but has been relegated to the third slot, owing to the tremendous handicap of injuries. He will be used only in an emergency.

Big Joe Bartos of Lorain, O., was given the full back assignment, with Sunny Sundheim, formerly of Indiana university, next in line. Scott, Smackover, Ark., an all-season fixture, will be at left half, and Minisi, Newark, N. J., star at the University of Pennsylvania last year, supplants Bob Kelly, a star at Notre Dame last season, at right half. Smith, formerly of Miami High school, finally was given the quarter backing nod over Hunchy Hoernschmeyer, teammate of Sundheim at Indiana, by a close margin.

Squad to Leave Today

Like Jenkins, Kelly and Hoernschmeyer also have been plagued by injuries, but are ready for Saturday's game. Jim Carrington, guard, had a temperature of 100 today and was excused from practice.

A squad of 44 players will leave here at 3 o'clock tomorrow, traveling in buses to Baltimore, where they will entrain for Philadelphia. The players will go into seclusion at Pine Valley Country club, near Clementon, N. J. A final workout in the Philadelphia stadium is scheduled for Friday afternoon.

FLU HITS 2D ARMY STAR

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 28 (AP)—Influenza felled another member of the Army football squad today as the Cadets began tapering off in their preparation for the Navy game in Philadelphia Saturday.

The latest victim is George [Barney] Poole, second string end, who was confined to his quarters with a temperature of 101., Both Poole and Arnold Tucker, regular Army quarter back, missed today's practice, which included a 30 minute scrimmage, last contact work for the Cadets.

Tucker, Poole, and Elwyn [Rip] Rowan, second string full back who received a bruised shoulder in today's workout, all are expected to play Saturday.

CHICAGO ENTRY IN ALL-AMERICA TO OPEN IN WEST

Denver, Colo., Nov. 28 (AP)—The Chicago entry in the All-America Football conference will play its opening game of the 1946 season in Denver against Los Angeles or San Francisco, the Denver Post reported today.

The Post said John L. Keeshin, owner of the Chicago club, has signed a contract and posted a $1,000 guarantee check to bring the game here as part of a campaign to raise funds for a municipal athletic stadium in which Denver High school games will be played.

The game will be the inaugural one for the league, which will start play next season, the Post said.

Four Schurz Stars Are Placed on 1945 City League Eleven

BY DAVID CONDON

Four players from the Schurz High school football team, which shares the 1945 City league championship with Tilden Tech and Austin, yesterday were selected on the All-City league eleven compiled by THE TRIBUNE on information furnished by coaches of the public schools.

Tilden, which faces Fenwick, Catholic league co-champion, in the city championship game in Soldiers' field Saturday, placed three performers on the team. Two linemen represent Austin, which won a share of the title by tying Schurz in the league semi-final playoffs. One each was selected from Marshall, Fenger, Harper, Lindblom, and Hyde Park.

Fourteen players, including an extra end and two backs, were named. Balloting was so close for these positions that extra selections were made.

Three Nearly Unanimous Choices

Bill Gay and Mike Swistowicz of Tilden, and Schurz's Dick Redman, all of whom were voted outstanding in all-state selections, were almost unanimous choices for the All-City league team. The other three backs are John Miller, who paired with Redman; Ray Rizzo of Lindblom, and Jim Fuchs, Hyde Park ace who suffered an injured leg midway in the season, but who was rated outstanding by many of the coaches.

Gay and Swistowicz were responsible for much of Tilden's success thru the last two years. In 1944, this duo sparked a drive that gave Tilden its first victory over a Catholic league school in the All-City championship game since 1928. In regular league play, Gay scored 76 points in six games. Swistowicz tallied 50, to finish as leader and runner-up in the central section scoring race. In Tilden's semi-final victory over Fenger, Gay scored four touchdowns, but these are not included in the league totals.

Dangersous Breakaway Runners

Redman and Miller, operating from the T formation, were dangerous breakaway runners, as attested by the 68 points tallied by Miller and Redman's 54 points in the six regular league games.

Rizzo, whose Lindblom team finished second to Tilden in the central section, and almost upset the Blue Devils, was fourth among scorers in his section. He had 31 points.

Only a leg injury kept Fuchs, a speedy runner as well as an efficient passer and kicker, from attaining greater success than he achieved. Nonetheless, coaches viewed him always as a dangerous threat. A leading sprint man on the track team, Fuchs paced the 1944 Hyde Park eleven and duplicated this feat in 1945. Galen Cheuvront of Parker, and Fuchs, were rated the leading south section backs. Cheuvront narrowly missed selection on the honor team.

Bill Nydam, center on Fenger's south section champion eleven, is the only Titan on the team, but he was given more votes than any other lineman.

Finishes Third Among Scorers

Phil Moio of Marshall, Bob Nusser of Schurz, and Gerald Kasley of Harper, share the end positions. Moio, an end noted for catching passes thrown by Gene Siegel, who received many votes for a back field position, was able to finish in a tie for third position among the scorers in the west section.

Nusser's value as a defensive man was stressed in the Schurz championship game with Tilden when he, along with the other Bulldog end, Harry Redman, proved effective in halting Gay and Swistowicz.

Another of the Austin players Heiland regards well is Len Aloy, who shares the All-City league guard position with Bob Nowicki, of Schurz.

City League's Best

THE TRIBUNE'S All-City league prep football team has been compiled on reports furnished by coaches in the public high schools. The league honor roll follows:

ENDS—Phil Moio, Marshall; Bob Nusser, Schurz; Gerald Kasley, Harper.

TACKLES—Ralph McGeehee, Tilden; Rocco Tarsitano, Austin.

GUARDS—Len Aloy, Austin; Bob Nowicki, Schurz.

CENTER—Bill Nydam, Fenger.

BACKS—Bill Gay, Tilden; Mike Swistowicz, Tilden; Dick Redman, Schurz; John Miller, Schurz; Ray Rizzo, Lindblom; Jim Fuchs, Hyde Park.

Five Chicago Tracks Assigned 163 Days of Racing in 1946

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

Chicagoland's five tracks will have 163 days of thorobred racing in 1946 with Sportsman's Park, the half mile establishment in Cicero, scheduled to open the season on April 27 with a 13 day meeting.

The allotment of dates, announced yesterday by the Illinois racing board, includes spring and fall sessions at Fairmount Park near Collinsville, raising the state's total to 221 days.

The Lincoln Fields Jockey club, operator of the track at Crete, has been given 30 days, starting May 13 and ending June 15. Memorial day is included in this meeting which will be moved from Hawthorne to the home plant, which has been unused the last three years.

Then comes the Arlington Park meeting of 36 days which will be held at Arlington Park for the first time since 1942. The last three meetings were coördinated with Washington Park and run off at Homewood.

Arlington Park's big day will be Independence day, falling midway between its opening date of June 17 and its closing on July 27.

Washington Park has been given 31 days, from July 29 thru Sept. 2, Labor day, after which Hawthorne will open on Sept. 3 and continue for 35 days thru Oct. 12. The dates were applied for by the Thomas F. Carey estate, owner of the Hawthorne property, which recently severed its connection with the Chicago Business Men's Racing association, long term lease holder.

There is a possibility that the estate of the late millionaire brick manufacturer and Chicago politician, represented by Robert Carey, a son, will operate the track next season but other interests are bidding for control and a decision is expected early next month.

SOX, CUBS END FEUDIN'; BOOK SPRING SERIES

Chicago Games to Climax Training Tour

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

Altho there has been a noticeable chill between the Cubs' front office and the man known as Jim Dykes ever since the latter insisted on squatter's rights for his White Sox on the former's personally built spring training diamond at French Lick, Ind., the two teams are going to be more or less chummy next April.

It was announced yesterday that in addition to the three games scheduled for disposal in California, the two city rivals would show off at Davenport, Ia., April 12 and then come home for a Saturday game in Comiskey park and a Sunday affair at Wrigley field on April 13 and 14.

Pirates, Browns Likely Foes

The complete plans for the training junkets of Charles Grimm's champions and Dykes' sixth placers have not been revealed, but the Sox may be able to expose all their dates within the next few days. The supposition is that, after submitting themselves to California sunshine for several weeks, the Sox will exhibit with the Pirates on the way home. The Cubs will exhibit along the way with the Browns, the fourth team booked for training on the west coast.

Mr. Grimm will pause in Chicago Monday on his way to the minor league convention at Columbus, O., and at that time may furnish some sort of a clew as to how he is going to conduct his Catalina Island camp. It will be overrun with athletes, the roster showing 49 at present and more on the way from Uncle Sam's various places of business about the world. The Yankees have met their problem of player abundance by arranging for two camps in Florida. Grimm can't very well take over another island, none being available, so may set up a swing shift.

Tucker, Wright Return to Sox

The wandering Dykes, who when last heard from in California said he would be in Chicago Nov. 29 [which is today], plans a jump down east before turning up in Columbus. During his visit in Chicago, if and when he arrives, he is expected to make it a point to see Leslie M. O'Connor, who after the fifteenth of next month will be Dykes' boss.

The White Sox office received word yesterday that Center Fielder Thurman Tucker, after a year in the navy, was ready to return to the club's active list. Right Fielder Taft Wright, with three years in the army to his credit, finally advised the front office that he had been discharged and that his physical condition warranted the expectation that he would be as handy as ever with a bat when he reappears in baseball flannels.

When Tucker and Wright are placed on the Sox active list it will contain a total of 49 names, presenting Dykes with a training camp problem similar to the one Grimm must solve.

Speak of Card-Bear Series and You Talk of Driscoll

BY EDWARD PRELL

Paddy Driscoll

John [Paddy] Driscoll is a walking encyclopedia of the hoary gridiron series between the Chicago Cardinals and the Chicago Bears, which goes back 25 years. The one-time Northwestern star has seen this series from both sides of the field, both as player and as coach.

Paddy played the first game which instituted the rivalry in 1920. It was played in Normal park, 61st st. and Racine av., and the Bears in those days were known as the Staleys. That one ended in a 7 to 6 victory for the Cardinals when the late Lennie Sachs, an end, picked up a Bear fumble and ran for a touchdown.

Slim Pickings for Cards

Since then the teams have met 48 times and the pickings have been slim for the Cardinals, who have won only seven in all, while picking up six ties and absorbing three dozen defeats. In fact, they have whipped the Bears only once in this decade, a 21 to 7 upset in 1940 in Comiskey park, where the rivals will meet in their 50th contest Sunday afternoon.

But this is Driscoll's story. In 1921 and 1922 he did double duty against the Bears as player-coach. And in 1926 Owner George Halas of the Bears bought Paddy for $3,500 because he needed a name player badly. That was the year Red Grange up and left the Bears to head his own eleven in New York. Against his old team that year Paddy scored all of the Bears' points in a 16 to 0 victory. The other game was a scoreless tie.

When his playing days were over, Paddy returned to the Cards briefly as a member of the coaching staff and here he is now in his fifth season with the Bears' board of strategy.

The Bears' other two coaches, Luke Johnsos and Heartly [Hunk] Anderson, know of this intercity series from the bumps and bruises they received in their playing days for Halas. Likewise the two Cardinal coaches, Phil Handler and his aid, Buddy Parker, up from the ranks, have participated in the competition as players.

Halas belongs to this select circle, too, for he has banged noggins against Cardinals in his playing days with the Bears; has schemed the strategy to use against the south siders in his job as coach, and has also helped in the tub thumping as owner of the Wrigley field team.

Fresh Air Practice

Both teams went thru exercises yesterday for the game which will close the 1945 Chicago professional gridiron season. The Bears worked on the lake front, where, in the words of Driscoll, "there was a lot of fresh air." Bobby Swisher, veteran half back, showed up against his physician's orders and lost a plea to engage in practice. He suffered a cracked rib in the Washington game two weeks ago and will not play Sunday.

The Bears, despite their belated rise to power with the addition of many pre-war stars, are not taking the game lightly.

"I've never seen a Cardinal game, especially in Comiskey park, which wasn't a rough one," said Johnsos. "Those fellows seem to save up all their best punches for us."

The game will begin at 1:30 p. m.

Bluejackets Play Irish in Gridiron Final

BY WILFRID SMITH

Great Lakes and Notre Dame come to their final football game of the season Saturday and the climactic contest of the midwestern campaign with several varsity men on the inactive list. The fourth game of the series during World War II. is scheduled at the navy training center, where approximately 25,000 sailors will attend.

Great Lakes and Notre Dame each has won a game in the recent series and there was a 13 to 13 tie in 1942 in Soldiers' field. If this contest were scheduled at Notre Dame or in Chicago, at least 50,000 would pay to see it.

Spoil Irish Record in 1943

In 1943, on the same field where Saturday's game will be played, the Bluejackets upset Notre Dame, 19 to 14, and ended the season long string of victories compiled by the Irish. Altho defeated in the last minute, when Steve Lach passed to Paul Anderson for a touchdown, Notre Dame still was named national champion. Last fall, the Irish gained revenge by winning, 28 to 7, at Notre Dame.

With the three game series deadlocked, this will settle the war time rivalry as it is unlikely the teams will meet next year. So far there is no reason to believe Great Lakes will continue an intercollegiate sports program after the approaching basketball season.

Great Lakes, according to publicity releases, is hard hit by injury and illness. Four regulars now are reported on the sidelines altho the Bluejackets did not play last week and thus have had two weeks to prepare for the Irish. Great Lakes holds five consecutive victories after losing three games and playing a scoreless tie with Wisconsin.

Four Sailors Ailing

Ralph Jones, end; George Terlep, quarter back; Marion Motley, full back, and Frank Aschenbrenner, half back, are the regulars reported as incapacitated by Lt. Paul Brown, Great Lakes coach. Terlep has influenza. Motley has suffered a shoulder separation in scrimmage, and Aschenbrenner is nursing a sprained ankle. Grover Klemmer, another half back, also was absent from practice yesterday, going thru the separation process. It should be pointed out, however, that no one of this quintet definitely is out of Saturday's game.

Notre Dame must shift personnel to take care of injury to varsity ends and possibly to one or more of the back field regulars who have carried on despite injury since the Irish tied the United States Naval academy a month ago.

Eliot to Speak at Two Chicago Prep Banquets

Coach Ray Eliot of the University of Illinois will appear at two Chicago high school football banquets next week. On Monday he will share speaking duties with Tom Stidham of Marquette at the Leo High Fathers' club banquet in the Morrison hotel and on Thursday he and Bo McMillin of Indiana will be on the Austin High program at the Elmhurst Country club.

SOCCER LEAGUE PROPOSES NEW WEST DIVISION

Fred Weizmann, member of the Illinois soccer commission, said last night that he has been authorized by the American Professional Soccer league to form a western division. He said that options have been taken for two teams in Chicago, two in St. Louis, two in Toronto, and that six other cities are being considered to round out the 10 club league.

One of the Chicago teams, the Maroons, has been granted a charter by the state of Illinois. The Maroons' incorporators are Edward Voynow, Winton H. Brawn, and Fred Friedlov. Attorney for the league is Franklin D. Trueblood.

Cards to Sign Jim Conzelman as Head Coach

Jim Conzelman will come to Chicago in mid-December to sign his 1946 contract as coach of the Cardinals, officials of the National Football league eleven said yesterday.

Whether Phil Handler, present head coach, and his assistant, Buddy Parker, will be retained on the staff, will be for Conzelman to decide, it was indicated. Handler was Conzelman's assistant before the silver tongued Missourian resigned prior to the 1943 season to join the St. Louis Browns baseball organization.

The Cardinals said that Conzelman will not be present for Sunday's game against the Bears in Comiskey park.

Conzelman, in Indianapolis, last night said he regretted a premature announcement of his return because of the embarrassment it had caused Handler.

2 Dog Shows on Schedule for Week-End

BY BOB BECKER

Dog fanciers who want a little pre-holiday entertainment this weekend will have to travel either to Joliet, to watch a field trial Saturday and Sunday, or to Cicero, where an all-breed show will be held Sunday only.

The recently organized Chicago Beagle club is sponsoring the beagle trial, which will be held on the Joliet arsenal grounds on alternate route 66, 10 miles south of Joliet.

Smaller Dogs Vie Saturday

L. R. Anderson, secretary of the club, says all dog fanciers are invited to watch the little hounds compete in this trial, starting Saturday at 10 a. m., when the 13 inch beagles will show how they can handle the cottontails.

The 15 inch beagles will compete Sunday. Two downstate beagle experts will pick the winners, which will receive cash, trophies, and ribbons. Sportsmen who want further information on the trial should contact Anderson, 503 Whitley av., Joliet.

Sixty Breeds Represented

The all-breed dog show sponsored by the Skokie Valley Kennel club will be held Sunday in the Cicero stadium, 1915 S. 52d av., for the benefit of the 40 and 8 convalescent center. The show starts at 10 a. m. and continues thru the evening.

Sixty breeds will compete in this bench event, with cocker spaniels, boxers, fox terriers, Kerry blues, shepherds, English springer spaniels, dachshunds, Bostons, and collies having the largest entries. Thomas H. Carruthers, Glendale, O., will pick the best dog in the show and also the best American bred.

SEMI-FINALISTS BATTLE TONIGHT IN C. Y. O. BOUTS

BY FRANK MASTRO

Semi-final bouts in the 15th Catholic Youth organization tournament will be held tonight in C. Y. O. center. Then the boxers will march on to the championship finals, in which 16 titleholders, eight each in the open and novice divisions, will be determined in the Coliseum Dec. 18. Thirty-two contests will be held this evening in all weight classes.

Last night's program of sustained action cleared the way for tonight's semi-finals. The third night of the meet brought out the same high spirited fighting that had marked the opening program on Monday. Novice and open division fighters slugged away without letup in each of the 24 battles.

Gorman Defeats Barber

First favorite to advance to the semi-finals is Pete Gorman, 1944 city Golden Gloves novice flyweight champion, representing St. Matthew parish, in his first try for a C. Y. O. open title. Gorman defeated Frank Barber, aggressive, rugged boxer from St. Mary Incoronata, in three hard rounds.

Milton Dockin of St. Ann scored a major upset when he conquered Al Sanchez, 23 year old furnace helper, in three rounds. Al, a C. Y. O. finalist last year, lost every round.

St. Mel Boxer Wins

Jim Sheeran kept St. Mel High school in the running for the novice bantamweight championship by beating Steve Salazar, Our Lady of Guadalupe. Also representing St. Mel High in the open light heavyweight division tonight will be Jim Hurst, member of the school football team. Jim has drawn Art Raby, 1945 city Golden Gloves 175 pound runnerup, as his semi-final foe. Last night's results:

COURT RELEASES SIX LAKE SIDE DUCK HUNTERS

Six duck hunters, arrested Nov. 10 on a breakwater in Lake Michigan at 78th st. and charged with discharging firearms within the city limits, were released in Grand Crossing court yesterday after a parade of witnesses voiced views favoring duck hunting along the lake shore. State Sen. Walker Butler represented the hunters.

Witnesses summoned by Sen. Butler testified that hunting along the shore of Lake Michigan is safer than along other inland areas in Chicago where hunting is permitted by ordnance. They included Ald. Emil V. Pacini of the 10th ward, Ald. Nicholas J. Bohling of the 7th ward, State Rep. John G. Ryan, John G. Henneberger, assistant state director of labor, and Livingston Osborne, director of the state department of conservation.

After Sen. Butler said that the two aldermen intended to introduce amendments to the city council to permit hunters to shoot along the lake shore, Judge Hartigan declined to give an opinion permitting the practice. The court ruled, however, that no intent to violate the law had existed and charges against the six men should be dismissed.

Glen C. Simpson Named St. Charles Club Chief

Glen C. Simpson was elected president of the St. Charles Country club at its 21st annual meeting Tuesday night. Other new officers include Herbert S. Mills, vice president; William Wood, treasurer, and Lester J. Norris, John Clark, Edward Ekvall, Dr. Donald L. Franklin, and Fred Kaiser, directors. Harold W. Peterson was named secretary and manager for the sixth year.

PROTESTS USE OF CITY SCHOOLS IN UNRRA DRIVE

Demands All Peoples Share Collection

A request that Chicago public schools be used as collection centers for a canned goods drive on behalf of the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration yesterday brought a demand from Bernard Majewski, vice president of the board of education, that food so collected be used to feed the peoples of all countries, including Germany.

Majewski protested that "if the Russians are not going to allow them [the UNRRA] to distribute these goods in all countries then we should not take any part in the collection."

Understands Poland Is Barred

Majewski said he understood the Russians would not allow the canned goods to be shipped into Poland.

"I am interested in the Czechs, Poles, and others who took the brunt of this war," Majewski said. "I'm for feeding children everywhere, including Germany."

The community canning program for overseas relief made the request to use Chicago schools as collection centers in behalf of the UNRRA.

Backed by Women's Clubs

Mrs. L. Robert Mellin, a member of the school board, defended the plan and said it was backed by most of the women's clubs in the city. She said that, while no drive had been planned for collection of canned goods, use of the schools as centers was expected to facilitate such collections.

The board finally approved the plan on the condition that James B. McCahey, board president, communicate with UNRRA headquarters in New York to determine whether the food will go to all countries without discrimination.

At adjournment four jurors—all women—had been sworn in, and four others had been tentatively accepted by the state. These eight and four others in the jury box waiting to be examined were locked up for the night.

Those sworn in are Mrs. Helen Masters, 4826 Addison st.; Mrs. Caroline Gierzynski, 2507 Augusta blvd.; Miss Grace M. Schaar, 1114 S. Cuyler av., Oak Park, and Mrs. Theresa W. Poggendorf, 2255 N. Avers av. All were qualified to impose the death penalty.

LITTLE DENNIS' MOTHER FOUND; ALIBI, ILLNESS

The mystery of Dennis Casey Jones, 2, turned over to St. Vincent's orphanage when his mother failed to call for him at a private nursery Monday, was solved yesterday when the mother, Mrs. Alma Jones, learned from newspaper accounts that police were seeking her.

Mrs. Jones had taken the baby to the nursery of Mrs. Charles Eldridge, 1645 N. Richmond st., last Saturday.

Mrs. Jones said she had been ill and did not learn of Mrs. Eldridge's action until yesterday. She was taken into custody by police on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and will appear today in Domestic Relations court. Mrs. Jones said she had got a job as a waitress and was to have reported this morning. She is divorced from her husband, Oscar Casey Jones, Waterloo, Ia., auto mechanic.

DWIGHT F. DAVIS, COOLIDGE'S WAR DEPT. HEAD, DIES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Dwight F. Davis, 66, secretary of war during the Coolidge administration, died at his home tonight after a six month illness. Davis donated the famous Davis cup for which international tennis matches have been played.

He was a veteran of World War I., decorated for valor in action, when President Harding called him to Washington as director of the reorganized War Finance corporation. Two years later he became assistant secretary of war and in 1925 was made head of the department by President Coolidge. President Hoover named him as governor general of the Philippines, where he served from 1929 to 1932.

As assistant secretary of war, Davis handled the controversy over military aviation provoked by the late Col. William Mitchell. Davis was acting head of the war department at the time and he ordered Mitchell's arrest and trial by court-martial.

He was a native of St. Louis, Mo.

OPA CAN ONLY HINDER OUTPUT, SAYS MOULTON

Has No Check Over Costs, Spending

The office of price administration can only bedevil the industrial situation and retard the process of reconversion and expansion because under existing conditions it has no control over production costs or purchasing power, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of Brookings institution, said yesterday.

Harold G. Moulton

Addressing the annual convention of the American Finance conference in the Palmer House, Moulton said the OPA, no matter how well intentioned, can merely "try to prevent prices from being increased more than is necessitated by the changing cost situation."

Farm Prices, Wages Uncontroled

"The OPA has no control over two of the primary elements affecting factors in the cost of production, namely, the prices of agricultural raw materials and wage rates," he said. "The former are controled by government purchases designed to support the income of farmers. Wage control since the end of the war has to all intents and purposes been abandoned with emphasis now on determination of wage schedules by collective bargaining."

He said that altho the OPA has announced its determination to prevent excess purchasing power from bidding up prices, it has no means of "getting rid of the troublesome excess of purchasing power or of preventing it from increasing."

"The OPA has no control over government fiscal policies and the volume of government expenditures," Moulton said. "OPA has no control over liquidation of government bond holdings; it has no control over instalment or other credit expansion, and no control over volume of employment or wage rates."

Can Only Slow Reconversion

Because OPA can control neither the supply of purchasing power which encourages inflation from the demand side nor the inflationary pressure from the cost side, it is "impossible for this agency to control the situation."

"All it can do, I repeat, is to slow down the reconversion and expansion movement," he said. "This agency is not equipped with the necessary personnel to review the cost price situation in a multitude of industries with the necessary expedition."

The steel industry is an example of how the OPA can retard reconversion, Moulton said. He explained that OPA refused an increase in steel prices on the basis of projected output with no means of knowing what this output will be, considering strikes and other uncertain factors.

Most Difficult Period Ahead

He said OPA is "not at all sure" of its decision in this industry because of a promise to review the situation early next year when 1945 operating figures are in. He warned that "whatever the figures for a year of readjustment like 1945 may show, they will not be true guides to 1946 prospects."

Moulton said the first half of 1946 likely will be "one of the most difficult periods in our industrial history" because of strikes, shortages of goods, controversies over wages and prices. The long range view is more hopeful, however, once industrial peace is restored and wages and prices are brought into more harmonious relationship.

OIL COMPETITION A WAR THREAT, DIRKSEN WARNS

Competition for oil may sow the seeds of the next war, Rep. Dirksen [R., Ill.] said last night in an address to the Illinois Agricultural association in the Hotel Sherman.

Dirksen contended that harnessing of the power of the atom for peace time uses is so far away that it will not replace oil in the world's economy for generations to come. He mentioned the fighting in Iran, where some of the world's richest oil fields lie, as an example of what may be expected.

Underwear Maker Taken Over by Wilson Brothers

Wilson Brothers, manufacturer of men's furnishings, yesterday announced the acquisition of Wright's Underwear Company, Inc., of New York. It will operate as an independent Wilson unit. Carol W. Alton, grandson of one of the Wilson founders, will become president of Wright's.

Housing Lack Laid Partly to OPA Controls

BY AL CHASE

The office of price administration is much to blame for the housing shortage, E. N. Ayer, president of the National Apartment Owners' association, charged yesterday. He spoke at the opening session of the group's annual convention in the Drake hotel.

Ayer said federal rent control is preventing owners from investing money in the enlargement of their apartments' living facilities and that rent ceilings are too low to attract capital into new construction.

Not Adequately Utilized

For this reason many apartment buildings are not utilized to their potential capacity thru modernization and building programs, said Ayer.

"We must leave no stone unturned to see that the property owner is treated the same as other business men," he said. "Eight million owners of rental property cannot continue indefinitely to have their incomes frozen at 1941 levels and pay 1945 wage scales and 1945 prices for everything that goes into their buildings and everything they buy in order to live.

"The property owner is being squeezed between larger maintenance cost and the higher cost of living."

Expect to Develop Formula

One of the outstanding developments expected to be worked out at the convention will be the establishment of a formula by which the utilization of available housing units may be increased by as much as 10 per cent, Ayer said.

Rufus S. Lusk of Washington, D. C., executive vice president of the association, said that the organization faces the opposition of powerful interests, including the CIO, Consumers' league, and other groups "which do not believe in the rights of real property ownership."

OPA ANSWERS RETAILERS

Charges by the Illinois Federation of Retail Associations that regulations of the office of price administration encourage production of inferior quality goods were termed vague yesterday by Rae E. Walters, regional OPA administrator. The charges were made Tuesday in a letter sent to members of the Illinois congressional delegation.

"The trade association charges that OPA rules support inferior products while penalizing old established manufacturers who produce superior quality goods at a lower price," Walters said.

Termed Unrelated Subjects

"The solution advocated by the retail dealers, if I understand it correctly, is to grant price increases to the old manufacturer. This solution is wholly without merit and could only be inflationary in its result.

"Too low prices for old sellers and too high prices for new sellers are two totally unrelated subjects. To the extent that disparity does exist between old and new sellers, it is not to be remedied by bringing the old prices up to the new seller."

BANKING GROUP URGES INCREASE IN FRATE RATES

The Investment Bankers' association yesterday urged that frate rate increases be granted to provide "adequate railroad earning power."

"The evidence is convincing that a frate rate increase is an absolute necessity if adequate railroad earning power is to be maintained," said a report by the association's committee on railroad securities.

The committee, of which Fairman B. Dick is chairman, said specific recommendations as to the size of the rate rise are "impossible without more definite knowledge as to future labor and material costs."

The association concluded its three day convention in the Edgewater Beach hotel with installation of new officers. Charles S. Garland, Baltimore, succeeded John Clifford Folger of Washington, D. C., as president.

MOVE TO ASSURE NEWSPRINT FOR ALL PUBLISHERS

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Newspaper associations agreed today to see "that no newspaper suspends publication for lack of newsprint" if government control ends Dec. 31.

A conference of representatives of regional and state newspaper associations, called by the American Newspaper Publishers association's special newsprint committee, unanimously decided that regional and state plans would be used to meet any threats of suspension of publication.

W. G. Chandler, A. N. P. A. president, said "estimates indicate there is available for newspapers not more than 95 per cent in tonnage of the newsprint used in 1941."

HOW PULLMAN SET CAR PRICES AT 54¾ MILLION

Used Depreciated Current Costs

Under the offer of Pullman, Inc., to sell to the railroads the capital stock of the Pullman company, its sleeping car subsidiary, the railroads would get sleeping cars originally costing approximately $235,190,000 for about $54,752,000, an analysis of the Pullman proposal showed yesterday.

A group of railroads handling more than 80 per cent of the nation's sleeping car mileage has accepted the Pullman offer, which was made under court order requiring it to divest itself either of its sleeping car operations or its car building business. A three judge federal court will open a hearing in Philadelphia on Dec 10 to consider the various bids for the property.

Cars Offered in Two Groups

Pullman in its offer listed and put a value on the various assets of the Pullman company to provide a basis for arriving at the value of the stock. Chief among these assets was the rolling stock which was divided into two groups. One, consisting of 6,229 older type heavy sleeping cars originally costing about $186,700,000, was offered for a lump sum of about 20 million dollars. The other group, made up of 604 streamlined light weight cars originally costing about $48,320,000, was offered for a total of $34,752,000.

The price set for the older cars was reached by negotiation. Under the terms of their contract with the Pullman company the individual railroads had the right to buy these cars at their "sound value." This was interpreted as meaning cost of reproduction at time of sale less depreciation. Altho many of the cars in this group were obsolete, all were in service and producing revenues. This created room for argument as to their true value.

Newer Cars Experimental

Pullman decided a fair method would be to average their prices and charge a lump sum of 20 millions. This price after long negotiations was accepted by the railroad bidders for the property.

In the case of the streamlined cars circumstances were different. When they were built they were experimental. Whether they would be an operating success or whether the public would accept them was unknown. To protect its interest Pullman included a provision in its contract with the individual roads covering the building and operation of the cars that if a contract was terminated for any reason the railroad involved was obligated to buy the cars at cost less depreciation.

Most of the railroads that have used the streamlined cars have told Pullman they wish to buy them and in many instances railroads have asked to buy the older sleeping cars.

Prices Termed Fair

Pullman officials said they believe their prices for the cars are fair. In calculating a sound value as of today current reproduction costs would have to be considered. In some instances these would probably be twice the original cost. For the older cars it also is necessary to consider an undetermined number of years of useful life. This can be extended substantially thru the use of new high speed trucks, tight lock couplings, rubber cushioned draft gears and interior refurbishment.

The Pullman officials said reproduction costs for the streamlined cars probably also are much higher than the original cost.

Other assets represented by the Pullman company stock include: Shops, $3,271,914; laundries, $1,216,811; other properties, $287,662; materials and supplies, $12,500,000; net current assets, cash and securities, $2,500,000; and four light weight composite cars, $195,743. The total is near 80 million dollars.

Strikes May Delay New Street Cars for Chicago

New trolley buses and street cars are being produced at the Worcester, Mass., plant of Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company at the rate of two a day, Richard V. Chase, district manager, reported yesterday. Work on a Chicago order for 110 street cars, scheduled to begin in February, as well as orders of other major cities may be delayed if strikes in suppliers' plants continue, Chase said.

Chances 'Fair' Tire Rationing Will End Soon

Prospects are fair for the ending of passenger tire rationing late this year or early next year, a spokesman for a large Akron tire manufacturer said yesterday. Despite the labor shortage production recently has been at a fairly high level and is expected to rise next year.

The end of rationing will not mean the average erstwhile A card holder can walk into a tire dealer's shop and get all the tires he needs. However, it should result in an easing of the present shortage in which it is extremely difficult to find a new tire even if the potential buyer has a certificate from the office of price administration.

Full Supply Late Next Year

"It probably will be late next year before a person can enter a dealer's shop anywhere and get as many tires of a particular type as he wants," the tire authority said. "The industry in the last quarter of this year probably will make about 11 million passenger tires, about 1 million below the total it had hoped to produce.

"The minimum demand for new tires next year will be 66 million tires and the industry should be able to produce this number barring unforeseen difficulties, including strikes by labor. We estimate that about a million persons now hold certificates for one or more tires which they have been unable to get."

The failure of the automobile industry to make automobiles in the expected number was said to have had only minor effect in increasing the total of new tires available for the public.

90 Per Cent Civilians

Even when General Motors corporation units were assembling automobiles the industry was taking only about 10 per cent of the tire production, the 90 per cent going directly to civilian users, it was said. This same ratio was expected to obtain even if automobile production had increased because tire production has been rising.

Labor continues to be a problem in Akron with all the companies there 5,000 to 6,000 persons short in their working forces, it was said.

Meanwhile a cut of almost 15 per cent in December rationing of small truck tires, a reduction of 1 per cent in passenger auto tires, and the same number of large truck tires as granted in November for the Chicago six county districts was announced by James F. Riley, district OPA director.

20 PER CENT DIVIDEND IN STOCK VOTED BY MANDEL DIRECTORS

The board of directors of Mandel Brothers authorized yesterday a 20 per cent dividend payable in stock. One new share will be issued Dec. 28 for each five outstanding, to stockholders of record Dec. 8. Leon Mandel, president, said the dividend will be paid in shares previously issued and now held in the treasury. The company recently acquired a large block of its outstanding shares at a price below the current market figure and the book value of the stock.

William Redfield, formerly in the investment business, was elected a director of the company.

SURPLUS AUTOS, TRUCKS TO SELL AT FIXED PRICES

A program for selling surplus trucks, automobiles, and other motor vehicles at fixed prices rather than by auction was announced yesterday by the office of surplus property of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

The plan will operate in two week cycles. The "spot sale" system will be eliminated by designating specific sale days in one week for each priority group—federal government agencies on Monday, state and local governments on Tuesday and Wednesday, and veterans certified by the Smaller War Plants corporation on Thursday and Friday. The following week the remaining vehicles will be offered to dealers at no change in price.

The plan covers the disposal of trucks, trailers, school buses, automobiles, motorcycles, scooters, and house trailers. It does not apply to jeeps or integral buses.

STOCKS CLOSE UNEVEN AFTER LATE SELLOFF

Santa Fe Leads Rail Downswing

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—The stock market ended irregular today. A wave of last minute selling wiped out or reduced gains in a number of categories.

Air lines, some farm implements, and some of the rubbers held part of their gains. Rails were the biggest casualty. Santa Fe, which started down yesterday when directors declared only the regular dividend instead of increasing it, was 3 points lower.

General Motors President Charles E. Wilson's failure to participate in a Washington conference with labor department representatives concerning G. M.'s strikebound plants helped depress auto shares.

Sales aggregated 1,810,000 shares, against 1,830,000 yesterday.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite fell 0.3 to 75.0. The carrier average was off 0.8 at 47.6. Of 992 issues traded, 411 advanced, 413 declined, and 168 were unchanged.

BONDS TURN LOWER

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—The bond market ran into selling in the final half hour today and ended mostly lower after holding in a narrow range most of the season.

Offerings were concentrated in secondary rails after two days of rising prices. The Milwaukee bonds, spearhead of the advance earlier in the week, ended one-eighth higher to a point lower. Rock Island loans were narrow as were those of the Missouri Pacific and Baltimore and Ohio. New Haven bonds rose at one time but faltered with the others and were mixed at the close.

CHICAGO LIST HIGHER

Prices on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday extended their rise in turnover of 60,000 shares. Most active issues included Asbestos Manufacturing, up ¾; Automatic Washer, up 1⅛; Chicago corporation, down ⅛; Admiral, up ⅛, and Central Illinois Securities, up ⅝.

PRICES OF HOGS DROP FIRST TIME IN TEN MONTHS

The Chicago hog market yesterday experienced its first general price decline in 10 months and went to the lowest level since last Dec. 20 in the dull final trading. The market weakened as the session progressed, and broke widely in some classes near the close. Some packers said they had more hogs than they could butcher the remainder of the week. The average declined 20 cents a hundred pounds at $14.60.

Receipts totaled 35,000 hogs, including direct shipments to packers, raising the three day volume to 101,000.

Altho cattle receipts were comparatively small for a Wednesday at 12,500 many classes sold lower. The best heifers and steers brought the $18 ceiling, a steady price, but declines of 25 cents were general in beef animals quoted at $17.25 and below.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were abnormally low and prices rose mostly 25 cents.

Truman to Let Parley Chart Own Course

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach tonight announced that President Truman would not intervene as suggested to spur the flagging progress of the national labor-management conference.

Schwellenbach said the meeting was generally one of labor and industry representatives, "convened in the hope that labor and management could reconcile their differences," without government steering.

Drop Fact Finding Plan

The conference executive committee also received word that no agreement could be reached on proposed creation of fact finding machinery to minimize labor disputes by informing the public on disputed issues. This virtually eliminated hope that the conference would evolve any important new machinery for the voluntary, peaceful handling of disputes.

The committee approved a proposal that leaders of the two industry and labor groups represented should "meet as they see fit to discuss such matters as they find mutually desirable."

Admits It Is "A Little Vague"

Conference Secretary George W. Taylor admitted, when questioned at a news conference, that this was "a little vague" but said he believed it meant that the heads of the major labor and management groups were declaring in favor of frequent consultations on industrial relations problems.

"It is not a significant development if you say, 'What will it do to alleviate the present difficulties that plague the country?' But it is significant in the long range view," he commented.

CPA VIOLATORS SOUGHT, NONE FOUND—SMALL

Wishes One to 'Nail as an Example'

BY LAURENCE BURD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28—A house committee heard a federal agency head testify today that he would be "delighted" to find some prominent manufacturer guilty of violating government controls and "nail his hide to the wall."

John D. Small

The official was John D. Small, civilian production administrator, who testified before a house committee studying reconversion problems.

Small said "nailing" a well known industrial concern for a violation of federal edicts governing reconversion would serve as an "example" to the rest of the country of the need for "playing fair" in the scramble for materials to start peace time production.

He confessed, however, that a vigilant search by the enforcement branch of CPA [successor to WPB] has failed to uncover a single major business concern that has breached his agency's control orders.

The witness explained that ex-

Change the Name of POINDEXTER?

NO, SIR!

• Some of our good friends have suggested that the name Poindexter is a little long and not easily remembered.

Maybe so. Still, we're not inclined to drop it. For Poindexter stands for good whisky—has stood for good whisky for the past 90 years—ever since John Poindexter set up standards of distilling which have endured to this day.

The name Poindexter is a continuous reminder to ourselves, and a pledge to our customers, that there shall be no lowering of standards.

40% small grains will continue to be our basis of balancing ingredients. Jug yeast will continue. Low temperature fermentation will continue. The sour mash process will continue—

Likewise, the name of Old Poindexter will continue to stand as the sure identification of a highly individual and truly great Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whisky.

PRESIDENT ASKS ODT FOR REPORT ON TRUCK STRIKE

Will Meet Congressmen of 7 Affected States

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—Rep. Mundt [R., S. D.] said tonight President Truman has asked the labor department and the office of defense transportation to investigate and report to him on the truck drivers' strike in seven midwest states, including South Dakota.

Mundt said he and a representative from each of the other states affected had asked for an appointment with the President to discuss the strike. He said the President desired the information as background when he meets with the group, possibly Friday.

The other six representatives are Robertson [R., N. D.], Curtis [R., Neb.], Knutson [R., Minn.], Cunningham [R., Ia.], Ploeser [R., Mo.], Scrivner [R., Kas.].

Textile Strike Settled

Lewiston, Me., Nov. 28 (AP)—Union workers in six Maine cotton mills tonight unanimously ratified contract agreements, settling Maine's largest and longest strike since 1936. Some 7,000 operatives will return to work tomorrow in plants under strike by the CIO Textile Workers' Union of America since Nov. 2.

GRAIN FUTURES END IRREGULAR IN SLOW TRADE

Grain futures prices were irregular in cautious trading yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Rye moved in a range of 1⅞ to 2½ cents a bushel on the active futures and finished ⅝ to ¾ cent higher. July and September rye closed at the ceiling prices. Wheat was ¼ higher on the deferred deliveries. December and May wheat and all corn futures were unchanged at the ceiling. Oats finished ⅛ higher to ⅛ lower and barley ⅝ higher to ¼ lower, with December at the ceiling.

Uncertainties over the amount of cash rye and oats to be tendered on December contracts tomorrow, and over the official ceiling on the 1946 rye crop, also to be announced tomorrow, plus expectations the government will increase the subsidy on wheat flour caused the cautious trade.

SUGAR COMPANY NET INCOME DIPS IN FISCAL YEAR

Cuban Atlantic Sugar company yesterday reported net profit was $2,289,227 in the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, against $3,724,514 in the preceding fiscal year. The decrease was attributed by Laurence A. Crosby, president, to smaller production, the statutory wage increase, and the granting by the Cuban government of a share in blackstrap molasses proceeds to cane sugar farmers.

Pittsburgh Steel company reported a net loss of $1,274,752 in the September quarter, compared with net income of $195,451 a year ago.

GIMBEL BROTHERS

I understand that Gimbel Brothers, Inc., sales showed a large increase during the war. What was the earnings trend?—V. M.

The sales of this large department store chain increased each year from $87,963,000 in the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1939, to $194,552,000 in the 1945 fiscal period. After the recovery from the depression of the early 1930's the largest pre-war sales were $100,081,000 in 1938. The company operates Gimbel stores in New York City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Milwaukee; Saks Fifth Av. stores in Chicago, New York City, Detroit, and Beverly Hills, Cal.; the Saks 34th St. store in New York; and resort stores in Palm Beach and Miami Beach, Fla.

Altho income taxes rose from $215,000 in 1939 to $14,600,000 [including $13,275,000 excess profits taxes] in 1945, profits increased substantially. Earnings a share on 977,300 common shares were: 1945, $3.07; 1944, $2.10; 1943, $2.26; 1942, $2.13; 1941, $1.21; 1940, 23 cents. In the six months ended last July 31 the profit was $1.51.

If the new tax rates applying after next Dec. 31 had been in effect, the company's 1945 profits before contingency reserve would apparently have been about $11.40 a share. But this cannot be regarded as indicative of normal earning power. Reserve both in 1945 and 1944 was equal to $1.02 a share, and in the latest six months report to 51 cents.

No common dividend was paid until 1943. Payments in the current calendar year totaled $1. Outstanding are 188,789 shares of $4.50 cumulative preferred stock and about $24,480,000 long term debt. Net working capital last Jan. 31 was $35,[illegible],000.

CPA VIOLATORS SOUGHT, NONE IS FOUND: SMALL

tensive checks have been made by CPA to determine whether manufacturers are illegally "hoarding" inventories of still scarce materials and thus needlessy keeping supplies from others.

"We would be delighted," he said, "to catch somebody with a widely advertised product and nail his hide to the wall where every one could see it. Such an example would convince business and the public generally of the need for playing fair.

"But we haven't been able to find anybody to prosecute."

Industry Doing Its Best

Under questioning by Rep. Simpson [R., Ill.], Small said industry generally is doing its best to hasten reconversion. He said CPA inquiries have exposed as baseless reports that textile and clothing producers are deliberately holding back production until next year to take advantage of lower federal taxes.

Asked by members about strikes and walkouts, Small said it is obvious they are hampering conversion to peace output. He expressed the belief that the fault here lies with "both management and labor."

The witness explained that the "war incentive" which kept labor and industry pulling together until V-J day has given way to quarreling by "tired" men on both sides.

Small told the committee he hopes congress will continue rationing and priority controls, slated to expire Dec. 31, until beyond next June 30. He said federal controls must be retained most of next year on tin, rubber, and lead chemicals, among other items.

He predicted the newsprint shortage will continue into next year, but did not say whether CPA plans to drop newsprint rationing by Dec. 31, as recommended by its industry advisory committee.
